Irish, British to Talk.

By the Associated Press.

London, Jan. 12.—Great Britain and Ireland shelved their ancient hostility tonight for conversations to open here Monday on vital questions of defense, trade and the partition of Ireland.

The Dominions Office announced Prime Minister Eamon de Valera would head the Irish delegation which will confer with Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain and key British ministers.

The talks, marking the first official meeting of important delegations of the two governments in many years, were expected to be the most far-reaching between London and Dublin since the formation of the Irish Free State in 1922.

(By the new constitution which became effective December 29, the Irish Free State became Ireland in English and Eire in Gaelic. De Valera, who was President of the Free State, became prime minister.)

A communique issued here said "arrangements have been made for a meeting between representatives of the government of Eire and representatives of the government of the United Kingdom to discuss outstanding questions which affect relations between the two countries.

Paris Faces Panic As Franc Plunges In Labor Unrest

Paris, Jan. 12 (U.P.).—The French government, beset by labor and political troubles, was suddenly plunged into a financial crisis tonight as a result of heavy drains on the exchange equalization fund and strong pressure against the franc.

The raid on the franc was attributed to large exports of capital because of fright over the social situation, particularly Premier Camille Chautemps' inability to solve spreading industrial unrest.

There were rumors that Finance Minister Georges Bonnet, recalled from an ambassadorial post in Washington less than a year ago to pull the nation out of a financial tangle, was ready to resign.

Beard Must Go Back to Atlanta, Ashurst Says

'On Fastest Train,' Senator Adds; Hazen Demands Full Explanation.

Senator Henry F. Ashurst, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committe, declared last night "Sam Beard should be sent back to the Atlanta prison immediately, on the fastest train" and that he "hoped" Attorney General Cummings would order removal of the deposed gambling czar beyond the reach of his once lucrative rackets.

Ashurst explained he could not recommend Beard's removal by Cummings as he did not "wish to interfere." He added:

"The Attorney General well knows how I feel about matters of this sort. I don't have to tell him."

This statement from the head of the Senate committee most closely associated with the Department of Justice closely followed a demand yesterday from District Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen for a "full explanation from the Board of Public Welfare of why Sam Beard was permitted to return to Lorton."

"If any qualified and responsible person has information on the Beard case which he desires to bring to the attention of the board, the board will be glad to consider it. I have no personal knowledge of the case in detail and thus far no information on it has been formally presented to the board.

"Beard was transferred to Lorton with 12 other Atlanta prisoners

Drunken Pair Hunted Here In 7 Holdups

All available squad and scout cars and every detective officer in the District last night searched the city for two drunken gunmen, who held up seven business establishments within half an hour, fired twice at the proprietor of a grocery store, and escaped in a small automobile.

With a reward on the heads of the bandits, police were watching all bridges leading into nearby Virginia, while police in nearby Maryland and Virginia counties were aiding in the search.

Officers were watching especially liquor establishments and beer parlors. All sections of the city were being patrolled, but the Southwest section, where most of the holdups occurred, was the center of the greatest concentration.

Reward Is Offered.

Determined to see the gunmen brought to justice, Inspector Bernard Thompson, chief of detectives, late last night offered a reward of $25 for apprehension of the lawless pair.

Both bandits were described as being in their early twenties. One wore a leather coat and a green skull cap. He was blond, 5 feet 11 inches tall and heavy set. The other also wore a leather jacket and a brown hat. Both were described as being "tough and desperate" looking.

The holdups came in amazingly rapid succession. Apparently the bandits sought to avoid police by robbing two adjacent business places, then speeding drunkenly on to find other victims. Most of the places preyed upon by the robbers were small grocery stores.

Too Drunk to Walk.

As reports of the holdups grew, an urgent broadcast was made to all police cars to spare no effort to capture the gunmen. A special detail of two squad cars early in the evening was assigned to the Southwest area, and the detail was increased later.

Striking swiftly in the early darkness, the bandits first went to a gasoline station at Twenty-fourth street and Benning road northeast. Here they pointed a revolver at David Frye, of the 1200 block of Staple street northeast, the mana-

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, Jan. 12.—Generalissimo Francisco Franco's headquarters at Aragozza tonight announced that, as a result of surprise operations in the past 48 hours, the Aragonese city of Teruel was "virtually a prisoner" of encircling Spanish insurgents.

Completion of the strangle-hold on the wrecked city can be attained whenever Franco gives the command, it was asserted.

Airport Plan Altered Again By Roosevelt

By James D. Secrest.

The Camp Springs airport plan, recommended last summer by the Washington Airport Commission, yesterday appeared headed for discard, and the Gravelly Point project which has weathered many a congressional storm, was again in the ascendancy.

The sudden change in prospects for the Camp Springs bill, which was passed by the Senate last August only to be held up in the House, was brought about by President Roosevelt, it was learned, largely because of the Navy Department's opposition to the nearby Maryland site.

Two House members who in recent years have been active in the local airport controversy were called into conference yesterday by the President. They are Representatives Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, veteran champion of Gravelly Point, and Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, who for several years has urged development of Washington-Hoover Airport into a safe flying field.

Bill to Be Introduced.

Both declined to disclose Mr. Roosevelt's proposal, but they admitted the airport situation was discussed at length.

Nichols did reveal that he has drafted two bills proposing expansion of Washington-Hoover Airport, and he said he will introduce one or both in the House within a few days.

One of the measures would merely authorize the closing of Military road, thus permitting the airport to extend its runways, while the other would seek to fill in the lagoon and effect other extensions as well.

While it could not be confirmed, there were strong indications that the dissenting backers of Gravelly Point and Washington Airport might be brought into accord by the President.

Compromise Rumored.

One rumored compromise was that the President would withdraw his opposition to the immediate development of Washington Airport so that it might be used temporarily as a District-Federal flying field if the opponents of Gravelly Point would consent to its development over a period of several years.

Last August Mr. Roosevelt vetoed a bill providing for the closing of Military road and in a formal statement made plain his preference for Gravelly Point even over the Camp Springs site.

Nichols has been the outstanding opponent of Gravelly Point ever since he and other members of a sub-committee of the House District Committee denounced it in a report that recommended establish-

Cry for Labor Peace Spreads After Lewis, Dubinsky Clash; Buying Power's Return Urged

Assails Policies Of Corporations

Opposes Diversion of More U. S. Income to Durable Goods.

By Sidney Olson.

In profound disagreement with industrial and business spokesmen, A. F. Whitney, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, told the Senate Unemployment Committee yesterday that restoration of mass buying power was far more important to recovery than restoration of business "confidence."

Whitney, quoting and indorsing views expressed by Assistant Attorney General Robert H. Jackson, slapped at "the fundamentally fallacious" industrial belief that more of the national income should go to capital and the durable goods industries to assure prosperity.

His statement, couched in irony and backed with stacks of statistics, agreed with business spokesmen recently before the committee on only one point—that industrial production must be increased in volume. But even there he added:

"However, I cannot agree that the employing interests of this country practice what they preach when they close factories and throw men into the breadlines and refuse to produce the commodities so sorely needed by the American people."

Then he voiced his approval of proposals that Government and business counsel together to gear production to needs "if we are ever to solve our ridiculous paradox of hunger amidst potential plenty."

Whitney's opinions were in sharp contrast with those of the preceding witness—J. J. Pelley, president of the Association of American Railroads—who stressed the necessity, in the country's recovery from

Cardozo Reported 'Not So Good;' Fear For Life Increases

Fears were entertained early today for the life of Supreme Court Justice Benjamin N. Cardozo after three specialists examined him and announced that his condition was unchanged since yesterday morning, when it was reported as "not so good."

The jurist was too ill to receive President and Mrs. Roosevelt when they called upon him yesterday afternoon. They departed after leaving a bouquet of roses.

Cardozo was stricken with shingles, a nervous condition, on December 10, but last week suffered recurrent heart attacks. His physician, Dr. J. P. Earnest, jr., declined to amplify his late bulletin that Cardozo's condition was unchanged although Drs. Worth Daniels and Thomas S. Lee, heart specialists, were called into consultation.

Burke Will Ask Senate Monday For Inquiry Into Labor Board

Nebraskan to Press for Investigation of Alleged Failure on Part of Body to Administer Wagner Act Impartially.

By Robert C. Albright.

Senate investigation of activities of the National Labor Relations Board and alleged failure to administer the Wagner act in an "impartial" manner will be asked of the Senate Judiciary Committee Monday by Senator Edward R. Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska.

Burke said last night he would move to call up a resolution for a Judiciary Committee inquiry into whether the board "has been guilty of continuous and flagrant violation of the will of Congress."

The Nebraskan said he wanted "to sound out the views of members" on the proposed investigation. If there is objection to an immediate report, he said, he will ask a subcommittee study of "charges and evidence that have been brought to my attention."

Burke, who exchanged letters last fall with J. Warren Madden, chairman of the board, on alleged departure from duties of "an impartial tribunal, quasi-judicial in character," declared a representative of the board recently had been active among workers in his own State.

The Senator said Robert Davies, board representative, told the Omaha Central Labor Union "it has never been my misfortune to be in such an open-shop town as Omaha, Nebr.," and advised Omaha labor to "patronize union services only and insist upon the union label when buying goods."

Burke said the account of Davies' activities was carried in the Unionist, official paper of the Omaha Central Labor Union.

Formula Evolved To Close Breach

Widespread insistence upon renewed efforts at labor peace was voiced last night after John L. Lewis, chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization, and David Dubinsky, one of his principal lieutenants, clashed over responsibility for the failure of negotiations with the American Federation of Labor.

These were the principal developments of a series of events which started with a speech by Dubinsky in New York placing that responsibility upon the C. I. O.:

Lewis said Dubinsky ought to decide "whether he is flesh or fowl or good red herring."

Dubinsky retorted in a "manifesto" that the "laboring masses" were "hungering" for peace, "Mr. Lewis' wisecracking notwithstanding."

A. F. Whitney, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, said he would offer his services as arbitrator and had evolved a formula to propose to the A. F. L. and C. I. O. for ending their dispute.

James F. Dewey, crack Federal conciliator, undertook to negotiate differences between the C. I. O. American Radio Telegraphists Association and the A. F. L. Commercial Telegraphers in New York.

Senator Elbert Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, said labor peace was "a prime essential" if labor "is to go forward." Thomas is Senate Labor Committee chairman and a member of the Senate Civil Liberties Committee.

W. M. Leader, Philadelphia C. I. O. leader, attributed C. I. O.-A. F. L. differences to a "personal feud" between Lewis and President William Green of the A. F. L.

John P. Frey, A. F. L. metal trades department president, said Dubinsky "supports in its entirety" the A. F. L. position as to the collapse of negotiations and had called attention to "what I have been harping on for a long time—the influence of communism in the C. I. O."

Whitney declined to reveal his formula, but said he was ready to make it public after first acquainting

Deputies Scatter CIO's Picket Line With Gas Bombs

New Haven, Mich., Jan. 12 (U.P.).—Fifty Macomb County sheriff's deputies broke a United Automobile Workers picket line with tear gas and night sticks at the New Haven Foundry today, but the management, yielding to a request of Sheriff Robert C. Havel, did not reopen the plant.

One hundred and twenty-five men who had reported for work retired to a hotel which adjoins the company offices.

Approximately 200 U. A. W. members established a picket line before the hour for the day shift to begin work.

When the workers appeared, deputies charged the picket line. Six tear gas shells and flying clubs broke the pickets' ranks and the gates were cleared, but the workers did not enter.

Star Nearly as Big as Solar System of World Described for First Time by Chicago Scientists

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Jan. 12.—Discovery of the largest star ever reported was described today by Dr. Otto Struve, director of the Yerkes Observatory of the University of Chicago.

Dr. Struve said the star was so large that if placed in the center of our solar system it would encompass nearly all of it, reaching out to Uranus and leaving only the planets Neptune and Pluto outside.

The astronomer and his associates, Profs. Gerald P. Kuiper and Bengt Stromgren, made a formal report of their work in the Astrophysical Journal.

The star has been named Epsilon Aurigae. It was described as a binary star, or in two parts, with a diameter 3,000 times that of our sun and equal to 20 times the distance between the earth and the sun.

The larger component has a diameter of 2,000 million miles and is of relatively low temperature, about 1,000 degrees centigrade.

Dr. Struve said it was 3,000 light years from the earth and near the first magnitude star Capella, but despite its size and relative proximity was not visible to the naked eye.

The first clew to the existence of the giant body was detected by the late Edwin B. Frost, former director of Yerkes, in 1899. Dr. Struve said attempts to photograph it were being made with plates particularly sensitive in infra-red rays.

These rays were due, he said, to a phenomenon in Epsilon Aurigae's surrounding gases similar to that in our own heaviside layer, an ionized region about 63 miles above the earth's surface. But whereas the earth's atmosphere reflects radio rays and makes long distance reception possible, the big star's heaviside layer is so much more powerful that it reflects light and causes an opaqueness which has been observed in the 40-inch telescope at Yerkes.

The smaller star is much the hotter of the two and it lights the infra-red gas layer about the larger component.

The brighter star passes behind the larger one every 27 years, Dr. Struve said, and when it does its light, as seen from the earth, is reduced by half. That last occurred in 1929-1930, he said.

Dr. Struve termed the discovery of Epsilon Aurigae "one of the most outstanding contributions by Yerkes in its 40 years." The observatory is located at Williams Bay, Wis.

Gov. Murphy, Florence Allen Held Leading for Court Post

President Roosevelt last night was reported attempting to make a choice between Gov. Frank Murphy of Michigan and Federal Circuit Judge Florence E. Allen as the successor to Justice George Sutherland, who will retire from the Supreme Court Tuesday.

Due to the fact that the Supreme Court has a heavy docket and already is short handed, as a result of the serious illness of Justice Benjamin N. Cardozo, it generally was believed the President would act promptly in filling the vacancy to be left by Justice Sutherland. He may send the nomination to the Senate next week.

Both Murphy and Miss Allen were said to have been on the President's list of available candidates for the Supreme Court last summer, before the nomination of Justice Hugo L. Black. It now is reported that not only are they still on the list, but that their names lead all the others.

Mr. Roosevelt, who first named a woman to a Cabinet post, is said to be anxious to give a woman who has demonstrated her judicial fitness an opportunity to reach the Supreme Court. One factor, however, detrimental to Judge Allen is that she comes from Cleveland, whereas many persons believe Justice Sutherland's successor should come from farther west. In that respect, Gov. Murphy has a slight advantage. He also is a liberal Catholic, which politically would offset the Ku Klux Klan affiliation of Justice Black.

A new name, that of Senator Lewis B. Schwellenbach (Demo-

Lynching Bill Enemies Assail Gang Murders

Senate's Sectional Rift Over Legislation Is Widened.

A Southern attack on big-city gang slayings and lagging urban law enforcement yesterday widened the Senate's sectional rift over antilynching legislation and brought new warnings that a 'Democratic party split was approaching.

Bitter words were exchanged betwene Illinois Senators and Southern members after Senators Kenneth McKellar, of Tennessee, and Richard Russell, of Georgia, Democrats, charged the Senate was being asked "to legislate against the 8 killings in the Southern States and close our eyes to the 464 killings in Chicago in 1935 and 1936."

Later, Senator Bailey (Democrat), of North Carolina, reiterated admonitions voiced earlier by other Southern members that party solidarity was threatened by the Wagner-Van Nuys antilynching measure.

"When we won the victory of 1932, we won it as a Democratic Party," said Bailey. "Then a group of Socialists swooped down on the party and they have not left. In God's name, are we going to let them run us out of the party?"

Three Southern speakers—Harrison, of Mississippi, and Byrnes and Smith, of South Carolina, previously had warned party disruption might follow on the heels of sectional prejudices aroused by the bill.

Speaking in his leisurely North Carolina drawl, Senator Bailey served notice that he was going to discuss a lot of other things besides the bill, and would resume the floor today to talk about the business situation and the principles of Andrew Jackson, "among other things."

Swayed by Arguments.

Senator Tom Connally, of Texas, opposition floor manager, meanwhile asserted "the ball is rolling our way." He said several Senators previously committeed to the bill had been swayed by the Southern arguments. But the opposition fight is being made to avoid a vote, as a large majority of the Senate is claimed for the bill.

Bailey's charge that Northern "Socialists" in prominent party positions were trying to force the bill on the South followed his repetition of charges the bill was designed to capture "the Negro vote."

"When you get to catering by way of legislation for the Negro vote in New York, Philadelphia, Chicago and other large cities, you are going to repeat for yourself some very disastrous history," said the North Carolinian.

"We Will Not Yield."

"But we will not yield. We will not let anybody take the Democratic Party away from us. It is an institution down here, and no matter what happens, we will still be there in the same old Democratic Party."

Asserting the South was determined to continue State government as a "white man's government," he said, "you can do what you please about the Negroes in Pennsylvania and other States, but when you come down to North Carolina and try to impose your will on us—in that hour, so help me God, you'll learn a lesson you'll never forget."

Discussion Is Heated.

Sharp exchanges between Senators Dieterich (Democrat), of Illinois, and Russell and McKellar followed extensive quotations from the Illinois Crime Survey report by the latter two Senators. Dieterich charged they had spoken "untruths," and they hurled back the charge.

Senator Lewis (Democrat), of Illinois, rose to the defense of his colleague after McKellar said Dieterich "got hot under the collar and almost had a attack of apoplexy and dragged in the bloody shirt and started waving it."

Deiterich first rose heatedly to his feet when Russell and McKellar declared "law enforcement broke down 100 per cent as applied to gangsters" in Chicago. They demanded the bill be made to apply to gang slayings as well as lynchings.

Calls Charges Untrue.

"When a reflection is made upon the officers of my State who are charged with enforcement of law, that these things are being permitted to be done on account of the laxity of enforcing the law by grand juries and prosecuting attorneys, I say that it untrue," Dieterich said.

Dieterich declared that "crime conditions are rapidly disappearing" in Chicago and that "we are not protecting racketeers and criminals in Illinois." He repeated that the McKellar-Russell charges were "unfair and untrue."

When Russell refused to yield further, Dieterich added:

"I was going back and tell you something about the Civil War. You have been waving the bloody shirt ever since this matter came up."

Praises Peace Officers.

"I brand that statement as being wholly unwarranted by the facts and absolutely untrue that I have waved any bloody shirt here," hotly retorted Russell. "The Senator from Illinois is getting up here with a great heat and choler imputing the motives of other members of the Senate merely because we are reading from a report of citizens of his own community, people of Chicago themselves, indicting themselves. . . .

"He says he resents the imputations that are cast on the peace officers of that city (Chicago), and yet he would not permit us to resent the imputations that are cast on the peace officers of the South who have done far more to stamp out the crime of lynching than has ever been accomplished in the State of Illinois in dealing with gang killings."

They Tangle Again.

Senator Lewis sought to smooth over the controversy, but refused to say whether he would support a McKellar amendment to make the bill apply to gang killings. Later, Dieterich and Russell tangled again, when Dieterich asked the Georgian for a "dissertation on chain gangs down there and what they are."

Russell retorted that this was part of "a campaign of misrepresentation, a campaign attempting to pillory a section of the country, a campaign to disseminate vicious and unwarranted lies in regard to conditions in my State." Dieterich said Russell "just didn't want to talk about chain gangs."

When the Chicago crime controversy subsided, Senator Bailey took the floor. The North Carolinian renewed Senator Byrnes' earlier charge that the Democratic Party was courting colored votes. Bailey declared that "no national administration can survive" a party being "made to cater to the Negro vote."

"Hated" Republicans.

Bailey said the South "hated" the Republican Party because of Reconstruction period efforts to "impose the will of others on us." He said Reconstruction policies "destroyed the hope of the Republicans in the South, and those same policies will destroy the hope of the Democratic Party in the South."

"You go ahead," he said, "with your catering to the Negro votes in the North, and the same thing will happen in the North that happened in the South."

Administration Proposes to Extend Philippine Friendship Ties Beyond 1946.

By Franklyn Waltman

OF MORE than passing interest and importance is the revelation that the Roosevelt Administration tentatively has decided to propose a revision of the Philippine independence act to extend to the products of those Pacific islands preferential tariff treatment until about 1960, instead of ending it in 1946.

WALTMAN.

Whether Congress will agree to such a revision, which would have the effect of nullifying the reasons which motivated the present legislation, remains to be seen. But the harsh economic provisions placed on the Philippine Islands by that act should be nullified. It is only fair and just that such action be taken and the sooner the better. The proposed revision merits the support of every American who is anxious that the pledged word of his Government to give fair play to the Filipinos should be redeemed.

* * *

But there are other aspects to the proposal. Coming at this particular time, the plan for the United States to stay on a little longer in the Philippines—for it amounts to that—cannot be dissociated with the disturbed situation in the Far East. To what extent these considerations have influenced the Administration are not known, but they are distinctly present.

Extension of tariff preferentials to the Philippines means a continuance of the economic tie between this country and the islands, even though the political bond is dissolved. It means that American interests in the islands, exporting commodities to this country, such as sugar, will be permitted to remain there for a longer period. It means that the American exporter in this country will enjoy for a much longer period a special advantage in the Philippine market.

In brief, it means that the United States will not sever all ties, abruptly and completely, with the Philippines in 1946, as desired by many who voted for the Tydings-McDuffie Act—for as long as economic ties based on such preferences remain, this country will have a special interest in the welfare of the Philippines.

If such comes to pass, the Philippines will take on an informal dominion status in relation to the United States, comparable in some respects to the status of Canada and Australia in relation to Great Britain. The British dominions are as autonomous as the Philippines will be after 1946, being bound to England solely by sentimental and economic bonds.

It will be recalled that the pressure for the granting of independence to the Philippines came from the sugar and dairy interests of this country who wished to end the flow of vegetable oils and sugar duty-free into the United States. Not until this pressure became substantial did those who favored Philippine independence for idealistic reasons have a chance of achieving their objective.

Under the Tydings-McDuffie act, the terms of which were accepted by the Filipinos, quota limitations were placed on the import of duty-free sugar, coconut oil, yarn, twine, cord, rope and cable from the Philippines. All imports in excess of these quotas were subject to the full tariff rates. In addition, the act provided that, commencing during the sixth year after the Commonwealth government was established—that is, in 1941—the Philippine authority should impose an export tax equivalent to 5 per cent of the tariff rate levied by the United States on all commodities exported to the United States, otherwise duty-free.

This export tax under the act would be increased by 5 per cent of the American tariff each year until independence became complete—that is, in 1946. Thus, at that time the export tax would equal 25 per cent of the American tariff rates, which would constitute for the Filipinos a tariff preference of 75 per cent in the American market.

After independence of the islands becomes effective July 4, 1946, the act provides, "there shall be levied, collected and paid upon all articles coming into the United States from the Philippine Islands the rates of duty which are required to be levied, collected and paid upon like articles imported from other foreign countries."

This is exactly what a large number of the House and Senate wanted to happen when the act was passed. Those who feared that such an abrupt cessation of tariff preference in the American market would seriously dislocate Philippine economy accepted that proposal only subject to a provision that at least one year prior to the independence date representatives of the Philippines and the United States should meet to formulate recommendations as to "future trade relations" between this country and the islands.

So unsatisfactory were the economic terms of the Tydings-McDuffie act that President Quezon, of the Philippines, was unwilling to wait until 1944 or 1945 for the formulation of recommendations for future trade arrangements. He insisted in 1936 that the questions involved be settled at once.

As a result, this Government agreed to creation of the Joint Preparatory Committee, comprising six representatives of each government. This committee last spring commenced a survey into all phases of trade relations between the United States and the Philippines, holding a series of hearings in various parts of this country and in the islands.

The American half of this committee now has tentatively determined on "a plan which would call for the gradual elimination of the preferences remaining at the time when independence becomes effective" and according to the President, this gradual elimination would be at a rate equivalent to 5 per cent, annually of the American tariff.

In other words, in 1946, Philippine products would be subject to the equivalent of 25 per cent of the American tariff rate. Instead of being subjected to the full tariff rate after independence, Philippine products would pay 30 per cent of the full rate in 1947; 35 per cent in 1948, and so on, with increases of 5 per cent a year until the full rate is reached in 1960.

If the Philippine members of the Joint Preparatory Committee, due to arrive in this country soon, agree to that plan, it will be submitted to the President and Congress for their approval. This is expected to occur during the spring.

Snell Attacks Roosevelt for 'Veiled Threats'

Pinning entire blame for the business recession on the Administration and "its extravagant New Deal experiments," House Minority Leader Bertrand H. Snell, of New York, last night assailed the President's message to Congress as "an apology for the failure of New Deal policies and theories during the last five years." He urged the Administration to co-operate with Republicans in a program to restore employment and aid business.

In a radio address, Snell quoted statistics in an effort to show the recession has been one of the sharpest and most severe in history and claimed "the specter of unemployment and the fear of actual want" are "beginning to have political repercussions" as "millions of men and women ask themselves whether the cause of their trouble might not lie in the fundamental contradictions and exaggerations of the New Deal."

"We have been told for five years that the supreme test of New Deal policies would be in the number of men returned to their jobs. No matter what the cost, the President declared repeatedly, unemployment must be banished.

"Fruits of Five Years."

"Here the whole history and theory of the Roosevelt Administration is accurately summarized in a single sentence: in November, 1932, we had 11,000,000 unemployed and a national debt of $20,000,000,000; in January, 1938, we have 11,000,000 unemployed and a national debt of $37,000,000,000.

"Such are the fruits of five years of bootstrap recovery. Organized folly has once more run its true course."

Snell asserted the President's message carried "veiled threats," and that "in a time of grave national concern the President gave no realistic appraisal of the true state of the Union."

He declared Mr. Roosevelt was "trying to face two directions at the same time," because the President's message "was against all monopoly and restraint of competition on Monday," and "on Tuesday he was for controlled production and planned economy along the lines of his discarded and monopoly-breeding NRA."

Two Speeches Deplored.

He insisted the President's message, and recent "violent speeches" by Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes and Assistant Attorney General Robert H. Jackson were very similar in substance, so similar as "to suggest not only a common inspiration but even a common draftsmanship."

Passing to the point of the Ickes-Jackson addresses, Snell snapped:

"No more fanciful picture of a functioning economy has ever been painted than appeared in those speeches. I shall make no attempt to quote from them, because to cover their glaring inaccuracies and hateful misrepresentations would require a quotation of the speeches in their entirety. . . . I need scarcely point out to my fellow citizens that this luridly-painted picture of business engaged in mass suicide in the hope of thereby embarrassing or coercing its Government is too ludicrous to require serious comment."

Hits "Smoke Screen."

He declared Republicans stood ready at all times to amend former antimonopoly laws or pass new ones, but added that "our difficulties cannot be solved by verbal hate bombs. . . . If any monopolistic practices have been indulged in by any group in contravention of law, may I be permitted to suggest that it is the function of the Attorney General to institute legal proceedings rather than permit his assistant to machine-gun all business with vicious demagoguery."

He pictured the strategy of the Administration's antimonopoly campaign, which he called a 'smoke screen," as intended to drive a wedge between big business and small business, "regardless of the obvious identity of interest between the two.

"Monopoly is once again to be converted into a circus for the entertainment of the public. And behind this smoke screen the New Deal legislative program, which bogged down so woefully in the special session of Congress, is to be revived again in its entirety."

Charges Filed With Senators Against Hague

Lee Pressman, general counsel for the Committee for Industrial Organization, last night filed 40 affidavits with the Senate Civil Liberties Committee accusing Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City of denying constitutional rights to union workers.

Pressman asserted the affidavits revealed "the entire picture of abusive and intimidating tactics of Jersey City police who "persistently declare that they are acting under orders from the top."

Manhandling Charged.

The affidavits purported to show Jersey City police, with Mayor Hague's consent, intimidated C. I. O. workers and organizers, manhandled some, and ordered others to stay away because it was "not a healthy place."

Others were held incommunicado in jail under "filthy" conditoins, Pressman alleged. He charged Jersey City officials were attempting to "break down independence" of the workers.

"In addition, affidavits and documents have been submitted which go as far back as 1931 and show instances of denial of legal rights and the beating of men in Jersey City during the last seven years," Pressman said.

Affidavit Quoted.

A C. I. O. statement said, in part:

"One of the affidavits, signed by a Jersey City union worker, tells of a Hague detective warning him to 'keep away from Reds, agitators and trouble-makers,' and ordering him to stop distributing leaflets. When he refused, the worker was manhandled by other officers and shoved into a police car for removal. In reply to his protest, the detective said: 'There is no constitution in Jersey City—we are taking orders from the front.'

"Among the exhibits attached to the affidavits is a notice from Mayor Hague's office headed 'Important Notice,' which required all veterans to report at armory tonight, December 28, at 8 o'clock sharp. This is important. Message from mayor's office.' The notice referred to the veterans' 'mass meeting' held in Jersey City on that night at which threats were made against the C. I. O. that the police officials used as an excuse for refusing a permit for a C. I. O. meeting."

House Members Caught Napping Criticize Plan to Increase Veto Powers of Roosevelt.

CRITICISM OF THE new "item veto" power proposed for President Roosevelt rumbled yesterday from House members caught napping Tuesday when Administration supporters slipped it into the $1,415,000,000 independent offices bill.

"This is a dangerous proposal to take the power from Congress," Representative Maverick (Democrat), Texas, complained. "The President can use this power to dominate Congress. He could eliminate the civil service."

Woodrum, who admitted the amendment had not been discussed in the Appropriations Committee, said he had talked over the situation with Minority Leader Snell, New York, and Representative Taber, New York, ranking Republican committee member.

Representative Tarver (Democrat), Georgia, challenged the "fairness" of the procedure while Representative William P. Lambertson (Republican), Kansas, said it was "discourteous" and "the most asinine thing I ever heard."

"The place for members to be if they are interested in discussion is on the floor," Woodrum countered testily.

The proposal faced stern opposition in the Senate, where a judiciary sub-committee arranged hearings for January 21 on a constitutional amendment by Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Democrat), Michigan, aimed at giving the President item veto power.

The letter said Judge Geiger "has shown himself definitely opposed to organized labor in this State."

Clipper, Crew Of 7 Lost; Oil Smears Ocean

Copyright, 1938, by the United Press.

Pago Pago, American Samoa, Jan. 12.—Scattered fragments of an airplane found floating on the oil-smeared surface of the ocean 14 miles from here tonight marked the place where the giant Pan American flying boat Samoan Clipper crashed into the sea yesterday, carrying Capt. Edwin C. Musick, pioneer trans-Pacific flier, and his crew of six to their deaths.

Naval officials aboard the minesweeper Avocet, which reported finding the bits of wreckage northwest of the coast of this South Pacific island, said they had been positively identified as those of the big clipper plane, lost since early yesterday when it reported motor trouble 75 miles out of Pago Pago.

Navy and Pan American officials said there was no question but that all seven aboard the plane lost their lives when it plunged into the ocean, less than six minutes flying time from its base here.

Exploded in Midair.

Musick, veteran of a quarter of a century of flying and the man who blazed Pan American air trails over three oceans—the Pacific and North and South Atlantic—was in command of the 19-ton flying boat pioneering a new route from Honolulu to New Zealand.

It was believed the plane, which reported it was dumping gasoline as it raced back to Pago Pago Harbor with smoke pouring from the cowling of the motor, had exploded in mid-air or crashed into the sea and burned.

President J. T. Trippe, of Pan-American Airways, said facts indicated the fire developed when fuel was discharged to trim the plane to proper landing weight in accordance with "conservative and normal practice."

Musick's last report was at 8:27 A. M. Tuesday (3:27 p. m. Eastern standard time). At that time he signed off preparatory to alighting at Pago Pago Harbor.

After that there was a 22-hour silence, until the Avocet picked up a trail of oil slick, as it criss-crossed over the rolling blue Pacific, and followed the oil to the wreckage.

Crack Fliers Aboard.

Aboard the plane with Musick were Capt. C. G. Sellers, first officer; P. S. Brunk, junior flight officer; F. J. McLean, navigator; J. W. Stickrod, first engineering officer; J. A. Brooks, assistant engineering officer, and T. J. Findley, radio operator.

The crew included many of the crack men of Pan American's overseas fliers. Capt. Sellers was a veteran of nearly as many years experience as Musick and accompanied him on the first survey flight across the Pacific.

Crash of the Samoan Clipper was the first major disaster in nearly 1,500,000 miles of overwater flying by Pan American clippers. The airline has never had a fatal crash of a plane carrying passengers on overwater routes.

(President Juan T. Trippe of Pan-American Airways said in Washington that he was "distressed" to announce that the entire crew was dead.)

Veteran Pilot Dies With Clipper Crew

Capt. Edwin C. Musick and his crew of six lost their lives when the Samoan Clipper plunged into the Pacific off Pago Pago and burned. He is pictured at the controls of the clipper in which he made the first commercial round-trip flight from California to Hawaii in 1935. A veteran of a million miles, he was considered one of the best commercial pilots.

Wife Plunges 9 Stories Here And Still Lives

Shopping Crowds Gather Near Her After Fall From Bank Building.

Mrs. Orpha Keeler, attractive 28-year-old Pennsylvania matron, either leaped or fell nine stories from the District National Bank Building to the courtyard below yesterday afternoon, and last night was still alive.

She was saved from instant death when a single telephone wire connecting the bank and the Albee Building next door broke her fall. She plunged against the fender and radiator grill of a parked automobile before she struck the ground. Her condition was critical, however, and physicians at Emergency Hospital, where she was taken, held slight hope for her recovery. She has a fractured right leg, severe injuries of her back and chest and multiple cuts and bruises.

A visitor at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Farrell, 6515 Utah avenue northwest, Mrs. Keeler had come here from her residence in Mount Lebanon, a suburb of Pittsburgh. Mr. Farrell is her uncle. She is the wife of Chester Keeler and the mother of a daughter, Bessie, 7, who was in Pittsburgh at the time of the tragedy.

Went Shoping First.

Mrs. Keeler went downtown alone yesterday, apparently to shop. She had been under the care of a physician, police said, because of a nervous breakdown, but apparently had been in the best of spirits.

She entered the bank building about 2 o'clock, and took the elevator to the ninth floor. When the car descended, she was seen looking from the window nearest the shaft, although she plunged from a window far down the hall. She struck the parked automobile of Robert L. Mitten, 1448 Park road northwest, with such force she smashed the right headlight and dented the right fender.

When Harry Hall, parking attendant, discovered her, she was sprawled on the ground. Her eyes were open but she was unable to speak. Presently she began to moan as downtown shopping crowds gathered. A doctor from the hospital set her broken leg before she was removed.

Mumbles Her Name.

En route to the hospital she mumbled her name and address. Farrell and a sister, Mrs. Charlotte Brandt, identified her later.

Although nobody saw Mrs. Keeler fall, A. J. Callahan, veteran elevator operator in the District Bank Building, took her to the ninth floor.

"She got in the car," he said, "and asked to go up to nine. I did not observe her more closely than the other passengers I take up. She was alone with me in the car. She was pretty and well-dressed. I put her off at nine, and next time when I came back, I noticed she was looking from the window, and I thought she was waiting to get in some office."

Fireman Walter S. Boss, of No. 2 Engine Company, noticed Mrs. Keeler pacing nervously by the window in the corridor a few moments before her plunge. He was in the building selling tickets to the President's Birthday Ball.

Dean Still Lives After Year on Orange Juice

Memphis Cleric Trying to Prove Soul Is Above Material Needs.

By the Associated Press.

Memphis, Jan. 12.—The Press Scimitar today said the Rev. Israel Harding Noe, dean of St. Mary's Episcopal Cathedral, was in the midst of an amazing fast undertaken "to prove that the soul is above the need of material life."

The paper said friends of the clergyman reported Dean Noe went on a diet of orange juice exclusively December 23, 1936, and since January 2 of this year has eaten only a communion wafer and drunk a sip of wine at the church's regular Communion services, held three times a week.

Spiritual Life His Aim.

"He is trying to prove that the soul is above the need of material life. He believes he can give up all material life and yet not die. If we get the theory correctly from his friends, he believes that he can live a wholly spiritual life in an earthly environment.

"The dean is a student of material science, but he has a set of theories of the universe all his own. All life, he says, is electro-chemical. All energy comes from the cosmis. Man has always taken energy in the form of food derived from plants or other animals. These, however, derived their life-giving substance from the universal cosmic rays.

From Original Source.

"The process of life is simply a conversion of electro-chemical energy. Dean Hoe believes he can, or is trying to see if he can, reach a state in which he takes his life energy directly from the original source."

The paper added that friends of the dean say he is performing all his church duties, including delivery of sermons, but that "he looks badly * * * his face is drawn and his voice husky" and they "fear he may collapse any day."

"I had to shoot or be shot," said Everett Hughes (right) yesterday to his son, Ralph Hughes (left), after the father was detained for questioning in the slaying of his wife, a Pueblo, Colo., writer. Cheaper Memorial To Jefferson Urged

A move to substitute a modest and much less costly memorial to Thomas Jefferson for the marble temple proposed by the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Commission was initiated yesterday by President Roosevelt, it was learned.

The plan was discussed with two members of the House, Representatives Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, a member of the commission, and Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma.

Neither would comment on the scheme, however, other than to say that the now dormant memorial proposal had been discussed.

A meeting of the commission, which has been inactive since early last year, has been called for next Tuesday, and it is probable that Mr. Roosevelt's plan may not be disclosed until then.

Glass Gives $100, But Gets No Eats

By the Associated Press.

The Democratic National Committee announced yesterday Senator Glass contributed $100 to its funds although unable to attend the recent $100-a-plate Jackson Day dinner. Glass wrote the committee: "While I could not attend the Jackson Day dinner, nevertheless, I desire to contribute $100 to the campaign expenses of the National Democratic Committee."

Washington's Memorial Fund Goes to G. W. U.

Group, Disbanding, Asks $232,043 Be Given to University.

Plans of the George Washington Memorial Association to erect a $2,000,000 George Washington Memorial Auditorium here were abandoned in District Court yesterday by trustees of the association who filed a petition asking its dissolution and transfer of remaining funds to George Washington University.

A schedule of assets disclosed a fund of $232,043.48, which minus the costs of the dissolution would go to the university.

Convinced, the petition recited, that original aims of the association to build an outstanding educational memorial to the First President were impractical and had been abandoned, the association, through Attorney H. K. Shipe, asserted transfer to the university of the remaining funds probably would fulfill the wishes of those who contributed.

At one time the association had more than $822,000, of which more than $600,000 has been spent. Congress provided a site south of Pennsylvania avenue, between Sixth and Seventh streets northwest, for the building, and preliminary construction work was started in 1921. However, the land grant was rescinded by Congress when additional work was delayed. The site now is occupied by Federal buildings.

In requesting court permission to make a gift of its resources to the university, the petition stated the trustees had determined upon that particular school because "the character and high standing of its scholastic work * * * its location in the National Capital and because it bears the name of George Washington."

Industrialists Seen Backing Japan's Army

Major Obstacle Removed in Trend to Fascism, Says Foreign Policy Expert.

"The major obstacle" in Japan's "rapid advance toward a Fascist regime has been removed" with support of the army's program by major portions of the country's finance and industry, a Foreign Policy Association expert said in an editorial in the association's bulletin.

He predicted failure for the United States in a policy of "neutrality and isolation" unless backed by economic pressure.

Tracing Japan's military activity in China to a decision in 1931, T. A. Bisson, research expert, who has just returned from the Orient, said:

"By 1936 the balance of power in Japan's business circles was swinging toward the heavy industries. New industrial giants, such as the Nussan interests dominated by Gisuke Aikawa, which specializes mainly in mining and machinery, were coming to the fore.

"These industrial magnates were naturally disposed to favor the army's program of war and territorial expansion.

"Until the beginning of the war in China, there had been a fairly important liberal opposition composed of the conservative business groups, the parties and the general public.

"Although observers in Japan noted a marked lack of popular enthusiasm during the initial phases of the war in July, this attitude rapidly changed when the avalanche of press, radio and other forms of propaganda began to deluge the Japanese public.

"This political evolution goes hand in hand with the extraordinary growth of the war industries in Japan and the rapid progress toward a controlled economy. The conquest of China, if and when completed, will find Japan in the grip of a powerfully intrenched minority, whose energies and aims are mainly bent on war.

"If success in China is complete, the accruing strength to Japan will not improbably be diverted to larger fields, say the British territories in the Far East or an attack on the U. S. S. R. This disaster can be averted, if at all, only by converting the war in China into an effective setback to Japan's dominant reactionary clique. By sending war supplies to China, organizing a widespread consumers' boycott of Japanese goods and, if necessary, as a last resort, establishing an official embargo on trade with Japan, the Western democracies have it in their power to defeat the ultimate objectives of Japan's militarists."

Hitler Will Avoid War Threat, Ames Tells Maryland U.

Sir Herbert Ames, Canadian authority on international affairs and former financial adviser to the League of Nations, declared last night in an address at the University of Maryland that he did not believe Hitler would go to war "even to save his own regime."

Sir Herbert, who was a guest of Chancellor Hitler at the Nazi rally in Nuremberg in September, said:

"Hitler will not go to war without the consent of his general staff and this staff is composed of World War veterans who do not want another war; they believe Germany's chances are not as good as they were in 1914; the general staff is cognizant of the fact that England will not make the same mistake of delaying that it did in 1914."

Ex-Senator France Asks Md. Divorce

Elkton, Md., Jan. 12 (AP).—Dr. Joseph Irwin France, former U. S. Senator and candidate for the Republican Presidential nomination in 1932, sought a divorce in circuit court today from his Russian-born wife, Tatiana V. Dechtereva France, on grounds of desertion.

The dignified 64-year-old physician testified they were married in 1927 in Paris. They lived at his Port Deposit, Md., estate, he testified, until September, 1931. His Parisian wife, dissatisfied with life in the country, then returned to Paris, he said.

He filed suit for divorce last June under a new Maryland law, which permits divorce after five years separation.

Four Held in Bail In Tavern Holdup

Four youths charged with robbing a Little Tavern hamburger shop of $7 January 4 were held for grand jury action yesterday in $5,000 bail by Police Court Judge Hobart Newman.

Prof. George Gow Dies.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Jan. 12 (AP).—Dr. George C. Gow, 77, professor emeritus of music at Vassar College and for 37 years head of its music department, died today.

He was former president of the Music Teachers National Association.

Only Trade Factor Delays Philippine Liberty—Tydings

By the Associated Press.

Independence for the Philippines may be hastened, Senator Tydings (Democrat), Maryland, said yesterday, if satisfactory trade relations between the islands and the United States can be arranged.

His comments followed President Roosevelt's announcement that a program was being considered to cushion economic impact of independence by granting the islands some trade privileges until 1960.

Tydings said military operations in the Orient would not affect the Congressional attitude on independence.

"Regardless of the Far Eastern situation and even supposing it did not exist, it is my belief that the American people as a whole are desirous of terminating our sovereignty over the Philippines at the earliest possible moment," he said.

Large-Scale Home Building Proposed

Plans for the construction of a huge home-building organization, capable of producing 1,000,000 single-family homes in the Nation in a single year, were discussed at the convention of the Home and Community Builders National Association at the Washington Hotel yesterday.

All that is necessary to develop such an organization is the close cooperation of financing agencies and land developers, said Don A. Loftus, head of the organization and president of Permanesque Homes Village, Inc., of Alexandria.

Ex-Diplomat to Talk.

Two Army airmen, Lieut. William H. Wise and Private Riley E. Scruggs, attached to the Headquarters Squadron, Eighth Pursuit Group, yesterday leaped to safety in parachutes when their pursuit plane crashed several miles west of Langley Field, Va.

Air Corps officials said they had been informed that the plane burst into flame in midair. Lieut. Wise and Scruggs came down in a marsh about 40 yards from the wreck.

Wise is the son of Maj. William W. Wise, of the Chemical Warfare Service, who is stationed at Schofield Barracks, Honolulu. T. H. Scruggs is a native of Salem, Va.

House Labor Unit 14 to 2 for Wage Bill This Session

By the United Press.

The House Labor Committee yesterday agreed to revise wage-hour legislation, as demanded by President Roosevelt, and campaign for passage at the present session.

The committee voted 14 to 2 in secret session to report out a bill without specifying its form and without holding public hearings, after "canvassing sentiment."

Chairman Norton said the bill the Senate approved, providing a 40-cent per hour minimum wage and a 40-hour maximum work week and enforcement by an independent five-man board, probably would be used as the basis for the House measure.

Questioned whether a flat "40-40" bill had been discussed in view of its support by the American Federation of Labor, Mrs. Norton said "the committee seemed to feel that would not be constitutional. In order to settle the question we plan to ask the Attorney General for an opinion."

First Lady Opens Fight on Paralysis

Eventually there will be no geographical unit in the United States without mechanical facilities for taking care of victims of infantile paralysis, if hopes of the new National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis are realized, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt asserted yesterday in discussing the forthcoming Fight Infantile Paralysis Campaign over a National Broadcasting Co. hookup.

"This means," said she, "that victims won't have to travel to Georgia for proper after-care, but will be able to get necessary aid near home. This is of especial importance to families of limited means."

Miss Henie to Get Bid.

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen and Richmond Keech, chairman and executive vice chairman, respectively, of the President's birthday celebration committee today will invite Sonja Henie, celebrated skating and screen star, to be present at the President's Birthday Ball January 29. Miss Henie will arrive by airplane at 2:40 p. m. today and will be met at the airport by the officials.

Miss Henie, who has been equally successful on steel blades and on the screen, would prove a decided attraction to the birthday ball and a decided addition to Janet Gaynor, diminutive redhead star who has already promised to be present.

The District Commissioners yesterday appointed Donald C. Dow, of the Journeymen Plumbers, Local No. 5, to a five-year term on the District Plumbing Board. Dow fills the vacancy created by the death of James O'Hagan, who was a member of the board for the past 25 years.

All licenses for master plumbers are examined by the board. The job pays $150 for the three-year period.

FreeEnterprise Urged for U. S. By Glenn Frank

G.O.P. Leader Assails Both 'Public Planning' and 'Private Monopoly.'

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 12.—Dr. Glenn Frank, chairman of the program committee of the Republican Party, today urged that free American enterprise under capitalism be given a chance to exercise itself without interference from selfish private interests or "foggy-minded politicians."

"We must see to it," he told a luncheon of the New York Board of Trade, "that neither private monopoly nor public planning is permitted to hamstring the buoyant energies of our national enterprise."

"Save for a few dramatic exceptions," he continued, "we have not seen a great deal of . . . courageous, flexible and competitive free enterprise in recent years. And the reason we have not seen it is that short-sighted private enterprises and foggy-minded politicians, sometimes separately and sometimes in collusion, have done things to this American system of free enterprise that have seriously crippled it and left it open to the challenge of its more radical critics."

Frank said "measures which sought to guarantee profits to capital . . . could be found even in the 'liberal' legislation of the national industrial recovery act. But I remind you that free enterprise ceases to be free enterprise when it asks that its risks be underwritten, or that its profits be in any measure guaranteed."

Carusi Lectures Grand Jury on Laws of District

Assistant U. S. Attorney Gives Jurors Legal Elements; 29 Indicted.

An impromptu lecture on elementary features of District criminal law featured the session of the District grand jury yesterday when Eugene Carusi, assistant United States attorney in charge of the jurors, explained to them some intricacies of laws they will be called upon to interpret.

In bygone years, Leo A. Rover, then United States attorney for the District, inaugurated the practice of spending one day explaining functions of the jury to the jurors, and describing laws to them. He usually began each new grand jury with that lecture.

Acting United States Attorney David A. Pine has continued the practice and Carusi, dean of one of the schools of National University, was designated to instruct jury members in their duties and in some laws they will be called upon to examine.

After listening to "Prof" Carusi's talk, the jurors reported 29 indictments to Justice Jesse C Adkins in District Criminal Court.

Veteran Files Writ To Gain Freedom

Basil H. Politt, former New York and New Jersey lawyer, filed a petition for a writ of habeas corpus in Federal Court in Baltimore yesterday for his release from the Perry Point Veterans' Hospital, asserting he was "kidnaped" and "locked up" by the Veterans' Administration in violation of his constitutional rights.

District Judge W. Calvin Chestnut ordered Government officials to answer the petition by the former la wprofessor at various colleges by January 18.

Records at St. Elizabeths Hospital showed that he had been admitted there September 7, 1935, and was transferred to Perry Point November 29, 1937, in a "not improved" condition. He had been found of an unsound mind by the District Supreme Court and the transfer to Perry Point was in accordance with the regulations.

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Scott Hart.

Tribute.

Nick Mamer, pilot of the plane that crashed near Bozeman, Mont., was one of the crack airmen who assisted the U. S. Forest Service in many fire emergencies, was well known to the service officials here and has drawn from R. F. Hammatt, assistant of the chief of the Forest Service (who formerly was stationed in the northern Rockies region), the tribute:

"Nick Mamer has made valuable contributions to the work of the Forest Service due to his expert assistance in pioneering the development of the use of aircraft in fire control and aerial forest mapping. His outstanding ability as a pilot was long recognized by the Service." Friends of Mamer in the Washington office of the Forest Service sent a floral tribute to Spokane. The crash occurred within the boundaries of the Gallatin National Forest. Local forestry officers aided in removal of the bodies and lent Forest Service equipment for the work, according to word received here.

Notes.

Four retirements will be recorded at the Government Printing Office at the close of this month. Those to leave are: Samuel E. Carter, 626 Thirteenth street northeast, an unskilled laborer, 26 years' service; John S. Douan, the Cecil, Apt. 408, 1026 Fifteenth street northwest, a linotype operator, 28 years; James E. Lowe, 721 K street northeast, a bookbinder, 33 years, and George W. Machem, 12 Adams street northwest, monotype casterman, 30 years. . . . For a book that is horribly fascinating we recommend "Traffic In Opium and Other Dangerous Drugs," just released by the Treasury Department's Bureau of Narcotics. In well done narrative it relates, among other things, the arrest of Low Hing Dow and Cho Bing Woon; of the arrest of a ship's barber, who came ushore with a mysterious chest that wasn't full of hair clippers and perfume; of the farms where the Government tries to cure addiction; of the means addicts use to get their drugs and of their numbers now in jail . . . Treasury Local 11, U. F. W. A., will be addressed by Representative John M. Coffee, of Washington State, at its meetng tonight. His topic: "War Can Be Kep Out of the World," a very timely subject. The meeting will be held at 532 Seventeenth street northwest. . . .

Reception.

The annual reception and dance honoring West Virginia's Congressional delegation will be given by the West Virginia State Society of Washington at the Raleigh Hotel Thursday evening, January 20, between 9 and 10 o'clock. Guests of honor will be Senators Mansfield M. Neely, Rush D. Holt, Representatives Robert Lincoln Ramsey, Jennings Randolph, Andrew Edminston, George W. Johnson, John Kee and Joe L. Smith. David S. Davison, the society president, will head the receiving line; John W. Smith will receive at the door. The receiption will be followed by dancing, from 10 to 1. All West Virginians in the District are inited to join in hovoring the statesmen . . .

Jobs.

The Civil Service Commission announces examinations for junior graduate nurse, $1,620, Public Health Service and Veterans Administration; associate wool technologist, $3,200, Bureau of Agricultural Economics; industrial classification analyst, and senior, associate and assistant industrial classification analysts, $2,600 to $4,600, Social Security Board. Te closing date is February 7 . . . Sterling Brown, author of Souhtern Road, and professor of English at Howard University, spoke at the Federal Workers School last night on "Modern American Negro Literature," in the seventh of a series of talks on contemporary literature sponsored by the school. For the coming term, the school announces that David Cushman Coyle, of the National Resources committee, and Leon Henderson, economic adviser to the WPA, have agreed to talk on present-day economic problems . . . The report of the credit union committee of Local 105, N. F. F. E. (composed of women employes of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing), shows "a tremendous growth" in volume of business and in the number of shareholders; following the report a bingo game was held, and among the prize winners were Eva Fletcher, Leo Williams, Anna McKenzie, Margaret Garry, Daisy Oldfield, Fannie Harper, Louise Vogler and Margaret Russell . . .

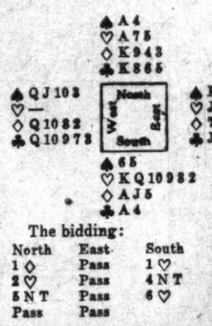
The physical well-being of rural America is endangered by a serious shortage of small town doctors and hospitals, the Agriculture Department discloses following a survey. In a number of States, there is only one doctor for every 1,000 to 1,500 persons. The more populous States have a doctor for as few as 500 persons. The survey attributed the shortage to a lack of medical equipment and facilities, and to the somewhat higher income and social advantages of the cities . . . Dr. Flora Slocum, technical adviser, Bureau of Public Assistance, Social Security Board, will discuss "The Practical Application of the Social Security Law" at the annual January dinner of the Home Economics Women in Business and the Home Economics Association of the Southeastern District of Greater New York in New York City tonight. Dr. Slocum is widely known as a consultant on the economic problems of the family.

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

Mr. Culbertson and I make a practice of discussing the weak points of average players and of designing our articles to correct those faults. We agree, for instance, that finesses remain the greatest individual hazard for the rank and file. Sometimes a player cannot determine positively whether a certain finesse is or is not necessary; at other times, when it is obvious that the finesse is unavoidable, his error is one of timing. In the hand described below the declarer could not be sure at the outset whether or not he would be able to avoid a finesse. The crux of the hand, therefore, was to defer the decision as long as possible.

North, dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.



The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	4 N T	Pass
5 N T	Pass	6 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

West opened the spade Queen. Dummy's Ace won, and a low heart was led to the King. The break being revealed, declarer then led back to the Ace and finessed against East's Jack. West meanwhile had discarded one club and two spades. Now, when declarer drew East's heart Jack, West let go the other spade, since it was obvious that declarer was not going to try to ruff losing spades in the dummy. Dummy discarded a low diamond.

Having drawn the trumps, too many players, I fear, would lead a low diamond to the King and finesse on the return. This declarer saw that there was no need for haste in that line. In order to embarrass West as much as possible for discards, declarer made the enemy a present of a spade trick. East won with the spade nine, and continued with the King. On these two rounds West's position became highly uncomfortable. He could let go one diamond, but to shorten his club holding further would merely invite declarer to establish a long club in dummy for a discard. Actually, West chose to discard the diamond eight. Declarer then played three rounds of clubs, ruffing the third.

Now down to diamonds, declarer could count that West had originally started with four spades, four diamonds and five clubs. Therefore when, on the lead of a diamond to the King a diamond return, the Queen did not show up from East, who was marked with an original holding of only two diamonds, it became a sure thing that the Queen would drop from West, and the necessity of a finesse faded completely.

Peace Demand Spreads; Lewis, Dubinsky Clash

C. I. O.

Lewis and Green with it, the United Press said in a copyrighted story.

"The fight," Whitney said, "hurts the prestige of organized labor. Such disagreement in the open is a detriment to the prestige of all labor. Labor's position should be such as to always place it in a spot to hang its best clothes on the line when appearing before the public.

"I have formulated a plan which I hope will be able to settle the dispute. The relations of my union and the 'big four' brotherhoods have always been most friendly on both sides. I think both Mr. Green and Mr. Lewis are attempting to do the best thing they can for their respective memberships."

In New York, Lewis and Dubinsky exchanged words over Dubinsky's renewed demand that peace be made with the A. F. of L., the Associated Press reported.

Dubinsky, head of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union, claiming a membership of 250,000, had insisted publicly upon reopening negotiations with the federation, blaming C. I. O. leaders for previous failures to effect a truce.

Lewis, here for a conference with Thomas L. Moses, vice president of the United States Steel Corporation, replied to the suggestion with the remark that Dubinsky "seems to be giving an imitation of Eliza crossing the ice and looking backward like Lot's wife."

"I think he ought to finally decide whether he is flesh or fowl or good red herring."

"Hungering" for Peace.

Dubinsky responded with a written manifesto saying the "laboring masses" were "hungering" for peace and that "Mr. Lewis' wisecracking notwithstanding," they would not "be denied such peace for long."

"May I suggest to Mr. Lewis, who is the acknowledged leader of the progressive labor forces, not to attempt to dispose of matters of such vital concern as labor peace and understanding in the flippant manner he does?" said Dubinsky.

"Mr. Lewis' reaction to our steady and consistent demand for peace in the labor movement is that this is 'looking backward.' I decidedly disagree with him. Peace and accord in organized labor, in my humble opinion, is looking forward and not backward.

"* * * I furthermore venture to say that, without distinction to group of formation, the laboring masses of America are hungering and praying for peace and it is my belief, Mr. Lewis' wisecracking notwithstanding, that they will not be denied such peace for long."

Dubinsky's statement made it clear he would continue to insist upon an early settlement of C. I. O.-A. F. L. differences, and placed him in a position of leadership among the C. I. O. moderates. He said, however, there was no intention to take the Garment Workers' Union out of the C. I. O.

Some C. I. O. leaders, he asserted in the first of his two current demands for peace, misrepresented the peace proposals offered by the A. F. L.

"No one man," he added, "has a mortgage on the labor movement."

He also attacked what he termed a communistic influence in the C. I. O. saying:

"It would seem as if 'The Daily Worker' (communist newspaper) had become the mouthpiece of the C. I. O."

"Not the Way to Unity."

Dubinsky, in his speech to garment workers, also said that "it is not true" that the A. F. L. sought to prevail upon its former organizations to desert their C. I. O. affiliates.

"The basis of agreement reached was that none of the C. I. O. unions come back until all matters in dispute had been adjusted through subcommittees and that the C. I. O. unions return as a unified group," he said.

He also took issue with the C. I. O. attitude that the A. F. L. admit all C. I. O. unions without any preliminary understanding or conditions.

"Such a peace," he said, "would be a patchwork peace and would mean continuing the fight in the A. F. L. This is not the way to unity."

There was much interest in Government circles over the development, but no indication that the Roosevelt Administration or any of its lieutenants would step in immediately.

John R. Steelman, chief of the conciliation division of the Labor Department, said department conciliators would continue to try to avert or settle strikes growing out of C. I. O.-A. F. of L. friction, just as they had in the past. He said they took such measures in connection with all strikes.

It was learned Steelman and Edward F. McGrady, former Assistant Secretary of Labor, conferred recently on the A. F. of L.-C. I. O. split, on McGrady's visit here for the Jackson Day dinner.

On Capitol Hill, Thomas, although declining to comment on the clash between Dubinsky and Lewis, asserted that "a house divided against itself cannot stand."

Representative O'Connor (Democrat), New York, said significantly that "Mr. Dubinsky is one of the most capable, thoughtful American-minded persons in the labor movement."

Denies Interpretation.

Frey said the A. F. of L. had not demanded that the ten original C. I. O. unions go back into the A. F. of L. and leave the other C. I. O. unions on the outside. He quoted the C. I. O. as interpreting the A. F. of L. demand to mean just that.

"Dubinsky's statement supports in its entirety the statement given out by our (A. F. of L.) peace committee as to why the conference collapsed," Frey said.

The C. I. O. yesterday interpreted a recent statemen by Daniel J. Tobin, a federation vice president, as meaning that the A. F. of L. was to blame for the conference collapse.

C. I. O. officials quoted Tobin as saying the federation insisted that the ten suspended C. I. O. unions return to the federation before the fate of other C. I. O. members was determined.

In New York, Green said he found it "advisable to withhold comment, at least for the time being," on the Dubinsky-Lewis row.

Senator Byrnes Confers With Railroad Executives

Underwood & Underwood.

the recession, of making the durable goods industries prosperous.

Pelley told the committee the proposed 15 per cent freight rate increase, for which the railroads have petitioned the Interstate Commerce Commission, was "vitally essential" to the carriers' continuance.

In tracing recent recession history as it affected the railroads, Pelley said that in the last three months carloadings decreased 8.4 per cent, totalo operating income (what is left of operating revenues after operating expenses and taxes have been deducted) fell 48 per cent.

Employment Drop Noted.

As a result, employment fell off rapidly, with 32,000 fewer men working in November, 1937, than in November, 1936, and 73,500 fewer last December than for the previous December.

He predicted that a return to normal business level would permit the railroads to install 2,000 new locomotives and 100,000 freight cars each year. Last year the carriers installed fewer than 500 new locomotives and 75,000 new freight cars.

He estimated railroad employment at 75,000 less than a year ago.

Whitney told the committee he also favored granting of the freight rate increase by the I. C. C., but insisted it be authorized contingent upon earmarking of the new revenue for effecting economies and improving operations and service through the purchase of materials.

He suggested that Federal regulation, through the I. C. C. be extended to cover domestic water and air transportation, and that the motor carrier act be enforced at once in order to eliminate "unfair competition of subsidized transportation."

He said railroads paid 8 cents in taxes for each dollar received, while highway competitors paid only about 3 cents and waterways competitors "next to nothing," and asked correction of this "inequality."

He also advocated Government handling of mail contracts with railways" insteady of diverting this business to motor truck transportation" through the star route system, asked revision of the undistributed surplus profits tax, and amendment of the rail retirement act to provide for compulsory retirement at 70, optional at 65.

Notes Unequal Ratio.

His attack on corporate policies was based in part, he said, on Jackson's statement that big business "has been saved from ruin and restored to arrogance." He said:

"In 1937, dividends paid out by all corporations equaled $5,120,000,000, while in 1929, they equaled $5,969,000,000 . . . In order to escape the tax on corporate surpluses, such surpluses were distributed in the ratio of 80 per cent to the coupon-clippers and 20 per cent to labor.

"It cannot be doubted that industry has the 'confidence' to produce, but with increased use of machines and power, it does not take long to use up all of the mass purchasing power and exhaust the markets. All lines of business proved in the year 1937 that they have the confidence, the capital investment and the capacity quickly to use up all the purchasing power available, and, accordingly, the charts for the year 1937 show a falling off of production and business activity and an increase in relief in the closing months of the year."

Speaking generally, he produced statictis in an attempt to prove that from 1919 to 1933, production per worker in manufacturing industries was increased 71 per cent while the worker's share of this productivity dropped 6 per cent.

"In other words," Whitney said, "every time the employer put an extra dollar in the worker's pay envolope, he added a little more than $7 to the price of his product. Since 1899 output per worker has increased 70 per cent, while real wages have increased only 10 per cent.

"This is a ratio of 7 to 1 in favor of capital, and yet the industrial and financial interests of this country continue to insist that prosperity for the masses of the people depends upon the durable goods industries and capital receiving a larger share of the national income.

"I fear for the consequences to the country if any appreciable number of our political leaders are inclined to accept the fallacies of industry and finance to the effect that all this country needs is to restore prosperity to the durable goods industries and 'confidence' to business and finance."

Blames "Hectic Twenties."

Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace, in amplification of his testimony earlier in the week, addresed a letter to Senator Carl A. Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico, a committee member, saying the hectic prosperity of the 20's was due in "very large measure" to the "extraordinary increase in private debts."

He said students of the subject knew that when the "speed of debt creation of the late 20's came to an end there was bound to be a recession." He placed responsibility for the present unbalanced Federal budget on the fact that "private capital, after its disastrous experience in the decade of the 20's, was timid about resuming its normal functions. It became essential, therefore, for Governmental capital to take up the burden which private capital was loath to assume."

Too great a debt expansion makes for undue increases in inventories and building, inevitably resulting in recessions, he said, while too little expansion means "stagnation and unemployment." With this in mind, he said the Administration's problem in the future, "as soon as we can get out of the emergencies created by the unwise policies of the 20's, is to use Governmental monetary and fiscal policies in cooperation with private agencies to see that both Governmental and private capital are used to bring about a steady, but not too rapid, expansion in business activity and production."

Liquor May Flow Here on Sundays

The President's Birthday Ball, which this year falls on Saturday night, may be responsible for modification of the District's week-end curfew on liquor sales.

The House District Committee, with only four members present, yesterday agreed that the long dormant Dirksen bill to permit on-sale liquor licensees to operate until 2 a. m. Sundays should become law.

Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, disclosed that hotel operators, who had previously opposed the bill, now want it enacted before January 29, so they may do business at the birthday ball.

ment of the Washington Airport Commission.

Field Is Unsafe, He Says.

"Regardless of where the national airport eventually may be built," Nichols said, "the fact remains that Washington-Hoover Airport is the only commercial flying field Washington now has and it is unsafe.

"Until the Federal airport is developed, it seems to me that Congress should clear the way for the Washington Airport owners to enlarge their field and remove the major hazards, particularly as the project will not cost the Government 1 cent."

Nichols refused to sign the commission's report last summer because he contended with Senator Copeland (Democrat), of New York, that the National Capital should have a close-in airport for short-haul traffic. The Camp Springs site, he said, might be all right for transcontinental flying, but was too far away to be of practical use for flights along the Eastern seaboard.

Radio Station in the Way.

The basis of the Navy Department's objection to the Camp Springs site, disclosed last summer in a report to the House Naval Affairs Committee, was that flying in that vicinity would interfere with a radio station under construction at Cheltenham, Md.

For a time Congress and the Administration appeared inclined to override the objection, but it is now understood that the President is ready to agree with the Navy and acquiesce in the discarding of the Camp Springs site.

The Camp Springs bill failed to pass the House on the closing day of the first session of the present Congress, chiefly because it was not called up until the last few minutes when members were waitnig to adjourn.

Senate members expressed resentment at the time because the House had passed the Washington Airport bill, but not the Camp Springs measure when there had been an understanding that both would be passed to appease the two factions on the commission.

Stengle Attacks Item Veto Power

Objection to the Woodrum amendment to the Independent Offices Appropriation bill, which permits the President to veto items in appropriation bills, was raised yesterday by C. I. Stengle, president American Federation of Government Employes, on the ground that it may operate to disadvantage of Federal workers.

"We are in sympathy with the President's desire to obtain efficiency and economy in Government service, but we do not believe they should be obtained at the expense of Government personnel," he stated. "Great harm would be done if salaries and standards of Government employes were adversely affected."

Dodges Gunmen's Bullets in Store Robbery Attempt

Two Candidates Held Leading For Court Post

crat), of Washington, last night, however, entered into discussion of prospective appointees.

Others prominently mentioned for the appointment have been Solicitor General Stanley Reed; Donald R. Richberg, former NRA administrator; Federal Circuit Judges Sam G. Bratton and William Denman; Judge Harold M. Stephens, of the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, and Senator Sherman Minton, of Indiana.

With the retirement of Justice Sutherland, the country west of the Mississippi River will be without a representative on the Supreme Court. Although such a geographical consideration is not controlling, most Presidents have sought to give all sections representation on the high tribunal. At all events, that is the argument used on behalf of candidates from the West.

Bratton Popular With Senate.

Reed comes from Kentucky; Richberg was born in Tennessee, but now makes Chicago his legal residence; Bratton lives in New Mexico; Denman, in San Francisco, and Stephens comes from Utah. From a geographical viewpoint Bratton and Denman are held to be the best qualified—but Denman is now 65 years old—an advanced age on which the President has frowned for new justices to the Supreme Court.

Bratton is the popular choice of the Senate, and of all those mentioned would have the least trouble in winning confirmation. Reed is the candidate of the Justice Department now, as he was last summer. Kentucky, however, is between the South and the Middle West.

Stephens is the candidate of Senators William H. King and Elbert D. Thomas, both Democrats, of Utah. Named by President Roosevelt an Assistant Attorney General in 1933, he was appointed to the Court of Appeals here in 1935.

Refused Interview.

Incidentally, it was revealed on Capitol Hill yesterday that the two Utah Senators were refused an interview with President Roosevelt to urge the appointment of Justice Stephens. Marvin H. McIntyre, Presidential secretary, is said to have declined to arrange the meeting on the ground that there was a White House rule against the President granting personal interviews to Senators on behalf of candidates for the Supreme Court, the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Board of Tax Appeals.

Capitol Hill had never heard of such a rule; neither had the press. Inquiry at the White House brought the response that there was a rule against granting Senators interviews with the President on behalf of candidates for any post. This rule was adopted, it was explained, to save the President's time as well as that of Senators under pressure from constituents to go to the front for favorite sons. In the absence of such a general rule, the President's burden would be much greater, it was said.

White House attaches explained that all Senators might submit any recommendations they wished for appointments in writing, and that these would receive serious consideration. The two Utah Senators, it also was reported, were refused interviews with the President when they wished to recommend Representative J. Will Robinson, of Utah, for a place on the Board of Tax Appeals.

Murphy a Favorite.

Returning to Supreme Court possibilities, significance was attached to the fact that Gov. Murphy had luncheon with President Roosevelt on Tuesday. White House attaches, however, insisted the visit was arranged before Justice Sutherland gave notice to the President last week of his intention to retire.

Murphy has been one of the President's favorites since the 1932 campaign, and he, in turn, has been an ardent New Dealer. Approaching his forty-fourth birthday, Murphy studied law at the University of Michigan, at Lincoln's Inn, in London, and at Trinity College, Dublin. He served for seven years as a State judge before becoming Mayor of Detroit in 1930.

He resigned that position to accept appointment by President Roosevelt as Governor General of the Philippine Islands. Subsequently he became American High Commissioner to the islands, retaining that post until 1936, when he was elected Governor of Michigan. He is unmarried.

Judge Allen is the first woman to sit on a Federal circuit bench. Born in Utah, she will be 54 years old in March. She studied law at the University of Chicago and New York University, and for several years was music critic for the Cleveland Plain Dealer. Prior to her appointment, in 1934, to the bench of the Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals, Miss Allen served 12 years as a member of the Supreme Court of Ohio.

James Roosevelt Not Seeking Office

Boston, Jan. 12 (AP).—James Roosevelt, son and secretary of the President, asserted tonight that people who want "secure and good jobs," profits in business and "security in their homes . . . expect a State administration in active sympathy with the aims and purposes of the National Administration."

His statement was issued as he boarded a train for Washington after a week at his Framingham home. He added: "Definitely and emphatically I will not be a candidate for any public office in 1938."

Burke to Press Investigation Of Labor Board

Board.

charges that agents actually have gone into workers' homes to get them to join certain organizations," Burke said.

"I want an investigation into the manner in which board agents and examiners conduct their investigations and hearings. I think it will be shown they appear as prosecutors rather than representatives of a quasi-judicial body."

The Burke resolution, now pending before the Judiciary Committee, asks examination into "the truth or falsity" of the following allegations:

"That it has favored one type of union organization as opposed to all other groups.

Intimidation Charged.

"That it has intimated local public officials, witnesses, employers and workers.

"That it has ordered the cancellation of valid contracts between employers and workers in defiance of the decrees of Federal courts.

"That it has violated the right of freedom of speech and freedom of the press.

"That its conduct has been such as to engender disrespect for law and order, increase dissension in industrial relations, and defeat the purposes of the national labor relations act."

A radio speech last August by Burke, attacking activities of the National Labor Relations Board, brought a written protest from Madden.

"I assume that a public official of your standing would not attack another branch of the Government and thus further confuse an already confused industrial situation, unless you have evidence to justify the attack," Madden wrote Burke.

"I assume also that this evidence would not consist of uninvestigated rumors or opinion."

Burke replied that he saw "no reason to modify in any particular" his charges. He asked Madden's opinion on whether the Wagner act "provides for an impartial tribunal quasi-judicial in character, or is in its functions more in the nature of a prosecutor."

Explains Its Functions.

Madden replied that the NLRB, like the Federal Trade Commission, the Securities and Exchange Commission and the Interstate Commerce Commission, was a "prosecutor" only to the extent it investigated violations, held hearings on evidence, kept a record and rendered decisions.

"The decisions of all these bodies," wrote Madden, "are subject to review in the courts, so that there is no possibility of any of them accomplishing an illegal result or one in violation of the policy which Congress has laid down in the act. But all of them are prosecutors as well as judges, if one chooses so to call them."

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

Washington Star Will Be Seen Here at End of Month in Vehicle by Author of Her "Last of Mrs. Cheyney;" Sonja Henie Here for Decoration Today; Benny Baker, in Person, for Earle Stage; Benny Davis Record; "If I Were You" to Carry on; Notes.

IT IS heartening to those who have the artistic integrity of the theater of living drama at heart in a season that gave great initial promise, but since seems to have wobbled a bit, to learn that that stalwart champion of the traditional playhouse, Gilbert Miller, is to bring a new play here late this month or early in February.

BELL.

Usually, this distinguished son of a brilliant father is one of the most prolific producers contributing to the Broadway theatrical scene, but at the turn of the year he had made only one presentation in New York—"French Without Tears," which closed on New Year's Day—in addition, of course, to sponsoring the second-year tours of Washington's own Helen Hayes in "Victoria Regina," which had its premiere in the National Theater in this city, and of "Tovarich," latterly featuring Marta Abba and Rudolf Forster, who succeeded John Halliday in the leading male role.

Last week, however, the producer announced three projects at one time, all of vital interest to theatergoers of whatever city. First, he is to present a new play by Frederic Lonsdale, entitled, "Once Is Enough"—the first new play to be seen in this country in the last seven years from the pen of the author of such hits as "The Last of Mrs. Cheyney," "The High Road" and "Aren't We All?" Ina Claire is to be the star of this piece, described as a "comedy of manners."

Miss Claire, whose latest vehicle was a dramatization of Anthony Trollope's "Barchester Towers," once before starred in a Lonsdale play, "The Last of Mrs. Cheyney," with such success that the combination gives auspicious promise of a repetition of that coalition of penetrating authorship and interpretative skill.

"Once Is Enough" will open in New Haven, Conn., on January 27, for a three-day engagement, and then will proceed to the National Theater in Washington, for a week, and Pittsburgh, for another, before making its New York bow in mid-February.

The second Miller undertaking concerns itself with the production, in association with Ashley Dukes, British critic, playwright and producer, of T. S. Eliot's celebrated poetic play of "Murder in the Cathedral;" the third, with a play called "Porcupine," by a Hungarian author, Ladislaus Bus Fekete, considered the most brilliant of the younger playwrights of Central Europe. No production date for this one has been set as yet.

• • • •

In connection with this belated announcement from the Miller office, it is interesting to note that the American premiere of a Lonsdale play is, in a manner of speaking, unique. Usually his plays have their first presentations in the author's native England, with subsequent productions in this country. Mr. Miller, with his usual perspicacity, this season is reversing the procedure. Washington should be glad. But why New Haven first?

• • • •

We might as well get this business of Sonja Henie's one-day visit to the National Capital straight, once and for all—I hope.

The former Olympic fancy-figure skating champion, and latterly one of the most amazing "discoveries" of the cinema, whose pictures have reached the top brackets of national grosses, will arrive at the Washington Airport this afternoon at 2:42 o'clock and will proceed at once to the Norwegian Embassy, where she will be decorated with the order of "Knight of St. Olaf" in the name of her King.

Miss Henie, subsequently—probably from 5:30, or thereabouts, on—will hold open court for members of the press and will be honor guest at a buffet supper given at the Shoreham by the local Twentieth Century-Fox executives, headed by Manager Sam Wheeler.

The skating film star is scheduled to leave Washington about 11:30 p. m. Something tells me she has a fine chance of missing her train!

• • • •

Then there is the matter of those reserved seat reservations and cash sales for the single "command performance" of the Shuberts' production of "Between the Devil," starring Jac Buchanan, Evelyn Laye and Adele Dixon, scheduled for the National on Sunday night, January 23, as inaugural event of the annual observance of the President's Birthday Celebrations in behalf of the Warm Springs Foundation Fund for the combat of infantile paralysis. The supply of second balcony seats, at $1, and first balcony seats, at $2, already has been exhausted by an unprecedented early public demand. There still remain, however, a considerable number of $3 balcony seats and $5 orchestra locations, among which excellent choices may be made. It, nevertheless, cannot be too strongly stressed that the time has come to hurry, unless you are aiming at an acute and lasting disappointment. This is a hit show, being brought to the Capital for this occasion at tremendous expense and through the wholehearted co-operation of everyone concerned in the production of the Dietz-Schwartz musical comedy, from the producers, through the stars, principals, players and chorus to the last member of the technical crews. Get your tickets now, while there are still some to get.

Benny Baker, young screen comedian featured in "Double or Nothing," with Bing Crosby and Martha Raye, "Hold 'em Navy" and other recent pictures, comes to the Earle stage for a week of personal appearances, starting Friday, January 21, according to announcement made yesterday from the offices of Zone Manager John J. Payette, of the local Warner Brothers interests.

This Mr. Baker has quite a theatrical background—outside of Shakespeare and the classic drama. One of vaudeville's most successful "stooges," he served an important function as assistant to Lou Holtz during five years of the two-a-day, of blessed memory. Then he joined Jack Benny's peregrinating troupe. Radio and stage engagements were not long in following.

Benny entered the celluloids in 1934, playing first in short-reelers, then in features. You know the rest. A cherubic and cheering person, this young Baker fellow. One almost wishes that he might be expanded into a Baker's dozen!

• • • •

And this reminds me that Benny Davis, coming to the stage of Loew's Capitol Theater tomorrow with his "Star Dust Revue of 1938" grown into the theater's present-day Gus Edwards as a discoverer of potential stars. The venerable Edwards, it is not too hard to recall, introduced such later luminaries as Eddie Cantor, Georgie Jessel, Lila Lee, Walter Winchell, Georgie Price and so many more that the list would fill this column. Benny Davis' score is almost as good—Harry Richman, Eleanor Powell, Vilma and Buddy Ebsen, Martha Raye, Little Jack Heller, Helen Morgan and so many more that the roster makes you dizzy—at least it makes me dizzy. Benny feels sure that in his latest troupe he has a few more that will be "in lights" before many seasons have whirled around. He has never missed yet.

• • • •

"If I Were You," the crazy thing now being done on the stage of the National Theater, is going on from here. Next week will be played in Boston, with other dates to follow.

This is quite understandable. There are many in the Capital who will tell you that Coauthors Paul Hervey Fox—who also is the producer—and Benn W. Levy, who in private life is the husband of Constance Cummings, star of the farce, in all probability "have something there."

It has been my thought from the outset that the ideal device for rationalizing this lunatic item would be to adopt the "dream formula." That, however, would be to embrace a hackneyed theatrical trick which long since has outlived its usefulness as an appeal to discriminating tastes in the theater. Under this guise, "If I Were You," no doubt, would be just "another one of those things." At the present time, most emphatically, it is not.

Good luck is what we always say.

• • • •

Voice-From-the-Back-of-the-Hall Note.

"If I Were You," I'd end the column right there. So the guy did.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, Jan. 13.—Settin' Around (Paramount): In the long corridor of the publicity department are framed photographs of Paramount's leading stars. Marlene Dietrich, Fred MacMurray, Claudette Colbert, Bing Crosby, Mae West, Gail Patrick—posed to look their prettiest and starriest, they smile at all-comers.

MAE WEST.

I never walk through that corridor without thinking of the other greats whose photographs hung there in years gone by. Many of them are dead now—Wallace Reid, Theodore Roberts, Alma Rubens. Others—and they, to me, are the more tragic cases, have disappeared from the screen and been forgotten.

• • • •

Some of them are well-to-do; many are living in poverty; a few are in desperate want. And not one of them that is not starving for the applause that they used to feast on when their photographs hung on the wall in the publicity department.

• • • •

Somehow, I wish I didn't have to walk through that corridor in order to reach the studio lot. It always leaves me with the uncomfortable thought that the stars of today whom I see on the sets are doomed to hit the skids and slide down into oblivion—too soon. I do not think I would care for stardom on the temporary basis that it is offered in Hollywood.

• • • •

Witnessed an exciting bit of action—and a freak accident—on the set where "Bulldog Drummond's Peril" is being filmed. Porter Hall, armed with a blacksnake whip, and John Howard, who wielded a rapier, were fighting a duel. Everything went off nicely until Hall, making a sweeping cut at Howard managed to get the lash of the whip tangled in the antlers of a deer's head which hung on the wall. He jerked, the trophy fell—and for a few moments everyone on the set thought that Hollywood had lost one of its best-loved villains. The point of one antler struck Hall on the temple and he went to the floor in a daze. "Maybe," he said ruefully after he had been helped to his feet, "this picture should be retitled 'Porter Hall's Peril!'"

• • • •

The best unintentional offscreen comedy in months was being played on the "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife" set today with Ernst Lubitsch—whose accent is indescribably thick—trying to direct Herman Bing—whose accent is even thicker. Bing had to speak a line containing the word "certainly" and Lubitsch wanted him to speak it without accent. Poor Herman—he tried his best, but it came out full of Teutonic static. And Lubitsch grew impatient. "Damn it!" he shouted, after disapproving of the fourth take, "Herman, you shoulds quit saying 'zertinly' —say ZERTINLY!"

• • • •

Every male on the "Stolen Heaven" set is head-over-heels in love with 17-year-old Olympe Bradna. The older men manage to hide their adoration under a pretense of parental interest, but the young men are frankly her slaves. And Olympe, wildly excited about her first co-starring role, pays no one of them the least attention. Today, chatting with me, she announced that she plans to take a course in cinematography this spring at the University of Southern California. Standing near us was a U. S. C. football hero who picks up a few odd pennies by working extra. "Gee," he interrupted. "I don't suppose they would let me add cinematography to my schedule—but wouldn't it be grand if they would let you go out for football!"

Screen Villain Is Knocked Out

For more than 30 years, Fred Kohler, sr., picturesque motion picture villain, has been successfully absorbing every form of punishment that could be devised only to be knocked out at last—by an oyster.

But the same determination which has carried him through scores of hand to hand combats, falls over cliffs and similar strenuous stunts, made him unwilling to take to his bed, with a violent attack of ptomaine poisoning, until the final scene had been shot in "The Mountains Are My Kingdom," in which Kohler was cast as the brutal Matt Ragona, opposite Noah Beery, jr.

It was more than a week ago that Kohler ate the oysters, while coming back from location near Sonora, Calif., to make finishing shots in the studio. As soon as he reached Hollywood he summoned his doctor and was ordered to bed, but he disguised his ailment from Producer Henry McRae until the picture was finished, and then "caved in."

Salvaged Flotsam Star's Boomerang

Three weeks ago a 20-foot fishing boat washed ashore in front of his Santa Monica beach home. The comedian pulled the craft to his house and immediately notified local authorities. He also ran an advertisement in the lost and found columns of local newspapers.

After two weeks, the actor, assuming no one would ever claim it, began working on the boat.

He bought spark plugs for the engine, a new propeller and oars. He even repainted the craft. A week's work and it was in tip-top condition.

Then a man called, said he was the owner and could prove it.

William Powell Rests in Peace

Robert Taylor brought this latter "news" back to William Powell, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer star, that William Powell's remains rest in England. In a little churchyard in Stanmore, Edgeware, Kentshire, England, Taylor found a tombstone with the inscription:

"In Memory of William Powell, the Harmonious Blacksmith, who died in 1780, aged seventy-eight years. He was Parish Clerk and Assistant during the time the Immortal Handel was Organist in this Church."

The stone bears the design of a hammer and anvil in a wreath, topped by a carved musical bar.

Mae West Will Lead Star List For Next Week

New Bills Are Announced for Local Theaters' Programs.

That incinerating star of the cinema, Mae West, much in the public prints since her recent broadcast from the West Coast, will be the pictured star of the week beginning tomorrow at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater, in her latest Paramount release, "Every Day's a Holiday." This quaint subject, dealing with the fabulous days of those "Gay Nineties," is described as the most amusing and least offensive of all the vehicles in which its star has appeared before the cameras. It has been glowingly reviewed from other cities where it has been previewed or publicly presented. The supporting cast is headed by Edmund Lowe and includes, among numrous others, Charles Butterworth, Charles Winninger, Walter Catlett, Lloyd Nolan and Herman Bing. The stage bill for the new week will be headlined by Clyde Lucas and his orchestra, introducing a considerable coterie of specialists.

"Love and Hisses," a new Twentieth Century-Fox production—already briefly celebrated in these columns—will be the major feature of the screen portion of the entertainment at Loew's Capitol Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. The principal roles are played by Ben Bernie and Simone Simon, supported by a long and able cast of comedians, singers, dancers and specialists, including Bert Lahr, Joan Davis, Dick Baldwin, the Raymond Scott Quintet, Ruth Terry, Douglas Fowley and Chick Chandler. The story is a gay one of Broadway and the night clubs, interlarded with tuneful interludes and spectacular scenes. The stage portion of the bill will be provided by Benny Davis and his "Star Dust Revue of 1938," in which will be introduced a large band of clever young performers, felt by their impresario to be pointed toward stardom.

Alice Faye, long popular on the stage, screen and over the radio, will be the pictured star of the week, beginning tomorrow, at RKO-Keith's Theater, in "You're a Sweetheart," a new filmusical enlisting the services also of George Murphy, Ken Murray, his stooge, Oswald; Charles Winninger, Andy Devine, William Gargan and Frank Jenks, the memorable taxi driver in "One Hundred Men and a Girl." The supplementary program will embrace a new issue of the "Screen Snapshots," a cartoon comedy in color and the latest release of the Pathe News.

The man-made fury of "The Hurricane" will sweep over Washington for a second week from the stage of Loew's Palace Theater. It was a foregone conclusion, of course, that so tremendously moving a spectacle of Nature gone berserk could not have exhausted itself in a single seven-day showing. This is the Samuel Goldwyn picturiation of the Charles Nordhoff-James Norman Hall story of the South Seas in which the principal roles are played by Jon Hall and Dorothy Lamour, surrounded by a group of artists that includes C. Aubrey Smith, Raymond Massey, Mary Astor, Thomas Mitchell and a huge cast of Polynesians. The auxiliary features also will be continued.

Claudette Colbert and Charles Boyer will resume their downtown popularity in the pivotal roles of "Tovarich," beginning tomorrow at the Metropolitan Theater This is one of the season's outstanding successes on both stage and screen and is notable, furthermore, for the present in the cast of Basil Rathbone as the "heavy." Anita Louise, Melville Cooper, Isabel Jeans and Morris Carnovsky are other principals who add to the humor and excitement of the story of the royal Russian emigres exiled in Paris.

For the week beginning tomorrow at Loew's Columbia Theater, the chief features of the bill will be the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production of "Rosalie," the magnificent musical comedy in which Nelson Eddy and Eleanor Powell are costarred, with Frank Morgan, Ray Bolger, Edna May Oliver, the Albertina Rasch Dancers, Ilona Massey, Billy Gilbert and a huge ensemble also contributing to the glory of a superlative production. The bill will be completed by the usual short-reel subjects and a new issue of the "News of the Day."

The new bill at the Trans-Lux Theater, opening tomorrow, will be notable for the inclusion of several short subjects of distinctoin, headed by "Cadet Champions, dealing with West Point's contribution to the world of sports. Another interesting offering will be "Stranger Than Fiction" and still another, "Peeping Penguins." The basis of the program, of course, will be the customary newsreel coverage of the world, augmented by cartoon comedies in color.

"Imitation of Life," the John M. Stahl picturization of the novel by Fannie Hurst, will be revived as chief feature of the bill for next week at the Little Theater, opening on Sunday afternoon. The stellar role in this memorable picture is played by Claudette Colbert. In the supporting cast are Warren William, Ned Sparks, Rochelle Hudson, Louise Beavers, Alan Hale and Fredi Washington. The bill also will include the "Disney Short Parade."

The Film Society of Washington's fourth program of the season will be presented in the Rialto Theater tonight and will feature Paul Rotha, British motion-picture authority, and a collection of the best-known English documentary films. The showing will be at 8:30 o'clock and will mark the only time this season when the society's program will be presented on Thursday night, instead of the habitual Wednesday.

Cooper's big "Black and White Revue" will be the next attraction at the Gayety Theater, opening with the customary matinee performance on Sunday. The white cast will be headed by Steve Mills and Jack Greenman, comedians, and Dorothy Maye. In the colored section will be found Velda, one of New York's Cotton Club luminaries; Shake Brown, the Six Lindy Hoppers and Rufus and Rastus.

New York, Jan. 12.

ERROR: Dorothy Parker was one of the group attending the benefit dinner last week for Robert Raven, the young American who was blinded while fighting in Spain. When the guests started making their contributions—after a speech which touched them all—Miss Parker started to write her check. When she wrote the date, Alan Campbell warned: "Now remember, this is the new year already. It's '8,' not '7'" . . . Miss Parker heeded his advice. That's why the check was dated "January 8, 1928."

* * * *

SAFETY: Max Steuer gave this advice to an author who wished to protect the priority of his story and its title: "First make copies of the original. Then put the original manuscript in a sealed envelope and mail it to yourself—registered. When the envelope arrives, don't open it. Just put it away . . . Then, if anybody steals the title or the story, the sealed envelope bearing the postal date-stamp and registration mark, is incontrovertible proof."

* * * *

ROMANCE: Teddy Hart, of "Room Service," was married to Dorothy Ludlow . . . Mr. Hart returned to the apartment where he had been residing with his mother and his brother, Songwriter Larry Hart . . . "Dorothy's gone to her mother and I came here," Teddy explained, "because our furniture didn't arrive yet!"

* * * *

ANGER: Raymond Scott, whose compositions include the strange-titled "Powerhouse," "Twilight in Turkey" and "Dinner for a Hungry Pack of Cannibals," phoned his brother, Mark Warnow, the band leader . . . Scott phones from Hollywood at 3 a. m. yesterday. He apologized for waking Mark, and said: "Just wanted you to suggest a title for this new song of mine" . . . "I've got a great title," the sleep-fogged Warnow replied. "'Don't Call Anybody Long-Distance at 3 a. m.'"—and hung up.

* * * *

SUCCESS: The Trocadero cafe in Hollywood is negotiating for Henny Youngman to come to California and entertain there Sunday night—for $300 . . . "But my train fare from New York alone will cost me more than that," Youngman protested . . . "True," he was told, "but think of the opportunity—to entertain before the notables here. The prestige will help get you vandeville booking" . . . "The only vaudeville left," Youngman returned, "is Loew's State—here in New York."

* * * *

COMPETITION: This week Art Jarrett will fly from Miami to New York, and Friday morning he'll start an engagement at the Roxy Theater. Just around the corner from Billy Rose's Casa Manana—which will open a few days later . . . And at the Globe Theater, down the street, "Tarzan's Revenge" is being offered—featuring Eleanor Holm.

* * * *

ENTERPRISE: Oscar Shaw, who will portray Grover Whalen in the World's Fair burlesque, "Let's Play Fair," is growing a mustache shaped exactly like Whalen's. Shaw was worried whether Whalen would object to the burlesque, and an intermediary spoke to Grover about it . . . "Mind it?" Whalen replied, "on the contrary. And if Oscar wants a perfect model for that mustache—here—give him this photo of mine."

* * * *

* * * *

YOUTH: Saturday night, at the Frank Marshall Chess Club, Dr. Emanuel Lasker, for 25 years world's champion chess player, played exhibition matches against 25 chess players at the same time . . . In making his first move Dr. Lasker noticed that one of these opponents was a boy of 15. He protested to Marshall that this opponent—Noel Freedman, son of the late David Freedman—was too young. Marshall ordered the play continued . . . At 3 a. m., after 16 opponents had been defeated, Dr. Lasker offered—and Noel accepted—a draw.

Aging Rapidly.

Make-up provided the greatest difficulty for Joel McCrea and his wife, Frances Dee, and for Bob Burns, during filming of the new Frank Lloyd production, "Wells Fargo." The McCreas age 26 years, from 1844 to 1870, and Burns about one year less during the film.

Jewel Experts Differ on Gems In Bennett Trial

Government Tries to Prove $5,000 Value; Denied by N. Y. Man.

Sharp differences of opinion between jewel experts developed in District Court yesterday, where Eula Mae Bennett and her husband, James Bennett, are on trial, charged with interstate transportation of stolen jewelry valued at more than $5,000.

One expert, Henry J. Hauck, of New York City, appeared for the Government. He estimated the three earrings and bracelets were worth $5,858.

Another expert, Leo Hoffman, also of New York, appeared for the defense and declared the jewelry worth only$ 3,507.45. The Government must show that the jewels are worth $5,000 or more or the indictment will collapse.

Mrs. Bennett was arrested in Union Station when she went there to call for her luggage shortly after her husband had, according to police, approached Edward Strohecker in an L street cafe and sought to sell him some of the stuff. Bennett fled and was not caught for many months, but the jewels he had sought to sell were left in the cafe.

Real Labor Leadership.

Laurels should be prepared for the unnamed A. F. of L. leader who is said to have been responsible for the conference which the President held with five prominent industrialists on Tuesday night.

Few people know what Mr. Roosevelt had to say to the delegation headed by Alfred P. Sloan, jr. Nor is it likely that the details of the discussion were especially important. The really significant fact is that the heads of five great industrial units, several of whom have been unsparing critics of New Deal policies, emerged smiling from a prolonged interview. They announced that they had had an "interesting and constructive talk" with the President; expressed hopes "of a better understanding" and "closer co-operation in meeting the difficulties of the moment."

The presence at the meeting of Donald R. Richberg, former head of the NRA, no doubt helped to guide the conversation along conciliatory lines. Mr. Richberg is a firm believer in the value of close co-operation between Government and industry and favors the largest practicable measure of industrial self-regulation as an alternative to coercive governmental action. His middle-of-the-road position qualifies him for the role of mediator in any discussions about the relationship of Government to industry. And such discussions, it is now announced, are to continue.

The sponsor for this meeting is therefore subject for congratulation, the more so because he seeks to remain anonymous. But his is not the only current constructive move in labor circles. The demand of David Dubinsky, himself high in C. I. O. councils, that this organization make peace with the A. F. of L. is another move looking toward constructive and universally beneficial solution of current economic problems. John L. Lewis, who knows best why this factional fight continues, will be well advised if he too comes to the realization that strife and division at this moment help nobody.

Penny-Wise Police Policy.

A mere increase in numbers would not, of course, convert a police force composed of incompetent men into an effective agency for the protection of life and property and the suppression of crime. However, a numerically inadequate force encourages crime, no matter how capable and energetic the individual members may be.

It is significant that despite the District's unenviable crime record to which Senator Borah called attention a few days ago, there is little criticism of the local police and no widespread feeling that they have failed to do their duty. Instead we find outstanding organizations, such as the Federal Bar Association, composed of lawyers in the various Federal departments, strongly supporting Maj. Brown's recommendation that 107 men be added to the force.

On the basis of statistical comparisons with other cities, the District police force may appear adequate. But Washington, as the Nation's Capital, makes special demands upon its policemen. Furthermore, the city's lay-out, and extraordinary traffic congestion and the rapidity of its growth are factors increasing the strain upon the Police Department. Lawyers are in an especially good position to appreciate the problems of the local law enforcement agencies in face of these conditions. They would be quick to censure if they thought the chief fault lay with the police.

As usual, the District's needs have received scant consideration at the hands of Federal officials who seem to regard it as a duty to prune estimates presented by local authorities. Even the Commissioners cut Maj. Brown's request for 107 men to 31—a total regarded by the Federal Bar as "insufficient to handle the District's crime problem." Then the Budget Bureau overruled the Commissioners and provided only for 7 new clerks in the Police Department.

There is still left the hope that Congress will realize the stupidity of a penny-wise policy of this sort. With that thought in mind, the Federal Bar Association has appealed to Chairman Ross Collins of the House sub-committee on District appropriations, to press for increased funds so that the police may deal more effectively with local crime and traffic problems. Congress certainly ought to be ashamed of its own tolerance of conditions that have given the Nation's Capital an unenviable reputation among law-abiding citizens.

The Autonomy Of The Schools.

All the implications behind recent correspondence between the District Commissioners and the Board of Education should be understood by Washingtonians.

Last spring, during hearings on the District appropriations bill, a question was raised concerning the Commissioners' jurisdiction over District buildings. Apparently without full consideration of all the factors involved, the House sub-committee decided to make the authority explicit. Accordingly, a rider was attached to the bill, stipulating that "all buildings belonging to the District of Columbia shall be under the jurisdiction and control of the Commissioners."

That provision appeared in the section of the act dealing with District health building plans. Its position, however, is of little significance. Wherever placed, the potentialities are important. This was revealed recently when the Commissioners, citing the provision, named a new committee to consider appointments of "custodial employes," or janitors and the like, for District buildings. In addition to representatives from the offices of the Engineer Commissioner, the Superintendent of Buildings and others, an assistant superintendent of schools was asked to serve on this committee.

The Board of Education has properly asked for information as to what this step implies. It refuses to accept the interpretation that school buildings are included in the phrase "all buildings" in the rider. For the organic act of 1906 expressly vests control of the public schools in the Board of Education. And this arrangement, the board is persuaded, cannot be superseded by an incidental proviso which seems to contradict it in one particular.

The board is not overcautious in its suggestion that the rider might prove an entering wedge for an attack on one of Washington's most prized possessions—a school system free from political influence. It reasons that if janitors should now become political appointees, teachers and school executives might soon be named in the same manner. Certainly local history records more than a few attempts to make political plums of the many substantial school jobs in the District.

To date all such attempts have failed. Educational appointments here are still made on a basis of strict merit, to the complete satisfaction of taxpayers and teachers alike. In now forestalling any possibility of a new threat to its autonomy in this respect, the Board of Education once again recommends itself to the community as the most competent agency to direct the Capital's public schools.

No Stooge For Hitler.

There can be no doubt that the coup d'etat engineered by Getulio Vargas in Brazil two months ago left a very bad impression in the United States. While recognizing the fact that dictators are not uncommon in the Latin-American scene, the dictatorship set up by Vargas, nonetheless, seemed different from the conventional New World type. If not directly inspired by Germany or Italy, as some were disposed to believe, it undoubtedly had distinct Nazi and Fascist overtones.

Now, in a very dramatic and heart-warming fashion, Vargas himself has acted to destroy this impression. He has ordered the suspension of deportation proceedings against several hundred Jewish immigrants from Europe whose visa permits had expired and who, therefore, were in Brazil illegally.

Until after the coup d'etat of November 10, no effort seems to have been made to round-up these individuals, most of them refugees from the epidemic of anti-Semitism in Central and Eastern Europe. But soon after Brazil announced itself a "totalitarian" state, steps to deport the illegal immigrants were taken. In many instances their enforced return to their countries of origin would mean continued persecution and hardship.

When this circumstance was called to President Vargas' attention he ordered the Brazilian immigration authorities to suspend deportation measures, pending the drafting of a less arbitrary immigration law. In doing so he was acting not only in line with humanitarian sentiments, but in a manner calculated to show the absence of racial and religious prejudice in his regime. He would have the world, and particularly the United States, believe that he is no stooge, either for Hitler or for Mussolini. So far as better relations between the most populous American republics is concerned, this is all to the good.

And Still No Ice.

A young lady who has done much to decorate the sports world, to say nothing of the screen world, will herself be decorated today. As the Norwegian Minister bestows the cross of the Order of St. Olav on Sonja Henie, there will be universal applause. Few champions have worn their honors so charmingly.

The winsome figure skater is now on tour giving exhibitions of her unique spins, glides and jumps. For thus indirectly publicizing Norway she is now being honored by her government. But there is irony in the fact that Washington, where she will receive the award, alone of all the cities she is visiting will not see her skate. The reason is only too well known: Washington has no rink.

This sorry lack not only prevents Miss Henie and her lesser imitators from performing here. Combined with a mild climate it also prevents many a relatively clumsy Washingtonian from indulging in a healthy and highly pleasurable winter activity. With all the pulling and hauling by our coteries of planners and public workers it does seem that a simple skating rink might be forthcoming—as a memorial to Jefferson if all else fails.

The Item Veto.

Perhaps the House was caught napping when it voted to give the President authority to eliminate or reduce any appropriation item in any bill if such action aids in balancing the budget or reducing the public debt. Without a record vote and without extended debate it approved this important extension of executive power in the form of the Woodrum amendment to the independent offices appropriation bill.

The only change, one which cannot be called admirable, was to agree to exempt the Veterans' Administration from the provisions of the item veto measure. Otherwise, the President was given even broader powers than requested in his recent budget message—powers not only to veto specific items in appropriation bills, but also to throw out appropriation "riders" carried in other bills.

There is reasonable doubt as to the constitutionality of this measure. But it is, evidently, in the interest of economy to give the President authority to veto appropriation items. That would discourage the insertion of unbudgeted items in important appropriation bills and the attachment of "riders" to other bills, with the result of throwing budgetary plans completely out of gear. Such irresponsible practices are a source of serious embarrassment to the President. As Representative Woodrum explained, the addition of unbudgeted items to appropriation measures often compels the Chief Executive to approve outlays he does not want in order to assure passage of essential legislation.

If the President were at liberty to delete such undesired items, executive control over spending would be much easier to establish and blame for any failure to keep within budgetary estimates could be placed where it belongs. Congress, moreover, would not be shorn of its essential power to control appropriations by the proposed change. Under the Woodrum amendment an executive veto order would not become effective for 60 days. And Congress could always vote again for a deleted item, subject to another veto hazard and possible repassage.

Conferring upon the President the authority to veto items in appropriation bills does not provide sure safeguards against extravagance. But it would make for a more responsible system of budget-making. That in itself would be a tremendous aid to the Administration in carrying out an economy program.

For The Fourth Estate.

In announcing the use to which Harvard will put the $1,000,000 bequeathed to it by Mrs. Agnes Wall Nieman, widow of the founder of the Milwaukee Journal, President Conant paid a generous compliment to newspapermen. The Nieman bequest has for its purpose "to promote and elevate the standards of journalism in the United States." To that end it will be devoted to establishing a number of fellowships at Harvard for the benefit of experienced reporters, editorial writers and special writers.

"The presence of a small group of practical and experienced newspapermen in residence," President Conant said, "is sure to enrich the Harvard community." To which the response is obvious. The enrichment of the individual journalist privileged to hold such a fellowship should be far greater.

The aim is not to train novices for the journalistic profession, but to offer opportunities for further study and intellectual stimulation to men eager to equip themselves for more effective pursuit of their chosen profession. To make acceptance of the fellowships attractive to such men, the amount of the stipend will, it is said, be large enough to enable holders to take leave of absence from their regular work without too great financial loss.

Judging from Dr. Conant's explanation, the new fellows will be a singularly favored group, unhampered by the kind of restrictions that often make academic grants-in-aid unacceptable to those who do not wish to follow a formal study routine. They will be at liberty to study those subjects which, in their opinion, will be most useful to them. And, presumably, they will not be constrained in their pursuit of learning by thoughts of credits, marks, or examination papers. To many seasoned newspapermen, the opportunity to acquire new knowledge without having to place the results of inquiry immediately on paper would be a highly prized experience.

Under a flexible study plan, permitting every holder of a fellowship to go wherever his inclination leads him—naturally within rational limits—the Harvard offer should make a wide appeal. And the small group to be chosen to enter the university next fall may well be envied by the many who are eager to repair the gaps in their knowledge and extend the scope of their interests with a view to becoming more competent and discriminating newspaper writers.

The Boycott Of Silk.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Recent newspaper notices have stated that women, by refusing to buy products made from silk, could cause a telling reduction in the revenue which Japan is receiving from this country through its exportation of raw silk.

We are said to buy between 80 and 90 per cent of their total output. This furnishes Japan with important and much-needed funds for financing its unprovoked war with China.

Women, by refusing to buy things "Made in Japan," have been responsible for the stores' decision to get rid of this same merchandise quickly and not to reorder a refused product. But silk! Many women literally live in silk, and very many still regard it as too much of a hardship to give it up.

It is a hardship—but so is war. Let us not forget that if Japan should win this present war easily she will not stop in her aggressive campaign. What with Italy and Germany—armed to the teeth—sitting hunched over the side lines, awaiting that time when they may perhaps throw in their strength with a victorious Japan and attack still another unsuspecting nation, it behooves America to use foresight.

The time to fight war is before it happens, and this is a pretty good time to let the rest of the world know just where we stand. That we intend to throw our strength, as far as possible, against aggressor nations as a discouragement to war activities. Women can help in this by buying wisely, since they represent a great purchasing power.

Extreme passivism, and its accompanying lack of preparedness, plus "pussy-footing," may for a time seem to delay our getting into conflict. But history proves, over and over again, that it never saved a people in the end. The only thing a bully understands or respects is force—and the determination and ability to defend oneself.

Because of popular demand the stores are now prepared to sell numerous substitutes for silk, in the perfected rayon hose, underwear and dress materials, made in this country, which is hardly discernible from the silk article. It is a little heavier, but less expensive, and certainly more durable.

Let us buy rayon instead of silk, and see what our boycott can accomplish. Let us take a stand, and stick to it! A MERE WOMAN.

The Ludlow Resolution.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In defeating the Ludlow resolution by 209 to 188, the House refused even to consider future amending of the Constitution whereby duly elected representatives should have to await the outcome of the popular vote on such a momentous question as a declaration of war.

Because of the President's stand against the proposition, many will undoubtedly seize this opportunity to denounce Congress for subserviency to the Executive, yet a respectable number of Representatives were not swayed by Mr. Roosevelt's letter to Speaker Bankhead. In this particular instance the members who supported the President have rendered the country a service, as pointed out in your convincing editorial on the subject in The Post of January 11.

The conduct of affairs with other governments is a highly delicate matter, especially when vital questions involving foreign policy are being discussed which may mean peace or war. And in these days of "continuous threat to the security and prosperity of our own people," the United States cannot afford to divest itself of a single safeguard.

Well, Why?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Andrew Jackson, seventh President of the United States, was honored on January 8 by Jackson Day dinners throughout our land. We heard much about the deeds of Gen. Andrew Jackson, and achievements and hopes of the Democratic Party. Yet nothing has been done by any of the Democrats for Old Hickory's great-grandson. Why?

Georgia's Action.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Georgia has declared the President's birthday a legal holiday. How fitting if the whole Nation would do the same!

When England and similar countries celebrate annually the birthday of some man who is a King only by accident and virtue, if any, of birth, America might well celebrate the birthday of a great leader who has shown us how to make one of the cruelest strokes of fate a dramatic stepping stone to a fuller life, not only for himself but for many similar sufferers.

It will be no surprise if yet unwritten history records Americans celebrating Franklin Roosevelt's birthday every year.

Challenge To Religion.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I was one of the audience attending the third annual meeting of the Committee for Religious Life in the Nation's Capital.

As religion, formally expressed in a democracy and in the hall provided by the people of this land, it was eloquent and spiritually satisfying as far as national spirit should go. But in one respect, if I may say so, the meeting developed a major challenge not to the outside world but within the ranks of the committee itself. And that was the forceful utterances centering around "united front," "godlessness," "communism," etc.

More commendable and satisfying was the exhortation given to the beloved disciple John, "that ye love one another." Might we even go so far as to say that this exhortation still applies and that it should be directed to the conditions that beget communism and godlessness.

Washington Gambling.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The question of Washington's gambling is now up again because of the death of Nubby Nuckols. Anti-gambling crusades are well enough, but the time and money spent is something that cannot be eradicated so long as men live. And, secondly, if it is perfectly legal to go out into Maryland and play the ponies, why is it such a horrible crime to play them here in town?

Now that it is no longer safe for anyone, either men or women, to walk even the most congested streets of Washington, and with holdups a nightly habit, wouldn't it be well to place all the available policemen at that sort of duty rather than devoting their time to locating gambling houses?

Couldn't Take It.

Once a wild, free soul, Kit-Cat is dead. The richest feline in Louisiana, and perhaps in America, couldn't take it. Or was she the victim of a civilization which impinged too pressingly upon her ego, too crushingly upon her individualism? Kit-Cat, we are told, was leading a normal and accustomed life, not idealistic, perhaps, but certainly practical. She roamed the alleys, or what corresponds to them in a town where they forgot to build alleys; she met friends, neighbors, acquaintances and interesting strangers, and they had wonderful meowings over something or nothing, as is the case with most of the rest of us, cats or people.

Then she was bequeathed $10,000. Previously she had thriven in plenitude, but now she was engulfed by prosperity. The old freedom, the normal contacts, the accustomed platitudes of life were whisked from beneath her whiskers. She was installed in a state that surpassed the magnificence of the longest-haired Persians, the shortest-tailed Manxes, the stupid but aristocratic Angoras. She had menials to attend her, nurses when she wasn't ill, special food as solemnly ordered in a last will and testament and approved by a solemn court. Now she is gone. Decede. Non est.

Two Views Of The Business Recession

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Here are my suggestions to the Administration as well as to labor unions to knock out Ole Man Business Recession and to aid the forgotten (consumers) people.

First, the average unemployed person is unable to obtain credit in any store, big or small—therefore, it stands to reason that if the Administration would go on record as favoring the growth of all crops and the manufacture of clothing on a large scale, and then purchasing all surplus crops from the farmers as well as clothing from the manufacturers, at cost, it would tend to put farm as well as industry on a regular schedule, putting thousands of unemployed to work.

This would in effect save the Government approximately 50 per cent, as it would not have to pay for curtailment and then again relief; the same funds used to buy surplus products would be used in the distribution of same. The distribution of farm products and clothing will not hamper or compete with business, as it is utterly impossible for business to derive anything from the unemployed—and it is a known fact that there are people who spend real money on alcohol or gamble it away to the detriment of members of the family, causing them hunger and illness.

Secondly, the labor unions should learn that demands for shorter hours and increased wages, while necessary, when followed by an increase in prices cause more harm than good. The union objectives must be met by a reduction of high directorate and officers' salaries, rather than increase in prices.

J. I. RESNICOFF.
Washington, Jan. 11.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The blame for the economic recession that we are now experiencing is being shifted aimlessly from capital to labor to Government and variations thereupon.

Let us make a cool-headed analysis of the problem and try actually and truthfully to see who is at fault.

The Roosevelt Administration helped to unshackle the chains on labor with its national labor relations act. It gave John L. Lewis and the C. I. O. an advantage that labor had never seen the like of, and what was the result? He could bring no more than 3,000,000 workers into the fold—a very small amount indeed.

Seeing that the American worker, in whom he had put all his faith, was not yet intelligent enough to grasp this opportunity, Roosevelt turned to business, which by this time was very much enraged at the New Deal. Naturally business would not co-operate.

Now with Messrs. Ickes and Jackson touching off the sparks, the Government is attempting to end this crisis by destroying monopolies. As yet the Government has not done much, but if it succeeds it will be doing much in the way of mitigating our troubles.

I believe it is clear that big business is at the root of our troubles. The Administration has hit upon the correct course, which it should have seen sooner.

Maxwell Street.

ALL DAY we had been following doctors down long white hospital corridors. I had seen the refrigerators where they kept the spare parts and had heard the same puns from internes and nurses at each hospital. I was already looking forward fearfully to a night of nightmares.

Then our hosts told us that as a special treat we were invited to spend the night at the medical dispensary in the Ghetto. The Ghetto to me was then only a name bearing a few vague connotations.

After seeing the lake at night and having a flat tire on the drive, we headed for the dispensary and, I fondly hoped, sleep.

* * *

Maxwell street was dark and uninteresting. A pale white light came from the door of the building they pointed out as the dispensary.

"Hold on!" shouted the interne and drove the car over the curb and so down the sidewalk to the door. I thought it was a queer time to be whimsical, but said nothing. The driver cut off the ignition and pulled out the key.

"Here we are," he said calmly and helped us out of the car. An explanation was forthcoming. The side of the street next to the dispensary was respected as the property of those who served the district, and nothing left there would be touched. But the other side of the street was another matter and a car parked there was the prey of the first comer. To play safe the doctors parked on the sidewalk.

Before we were asleep in the dormitory on the third floor five more cars were huddled in the protective shadow of the building.

It seemed that I had hardly been asleep when there was a knock at the door and I was told to look out the window. Thoroughly aroused and a bit mad about being awakened, I stuck my head out of the window overlooking the place where our car was parked.

At first there seemed nothing unusual there. A lonesome street light made a bright spot at the corner. Below were the doctors' cars. Then I looked directly across the street. In the shadows a dim figure was moving about the solitary car on that side of the block. The soft clink of metal on metal was the only sound, and the street light blinked.

I went back to bed.

Only a few minutes later the world fell apart.

"They do that every morning," said my hostess sleepily. I went to the window again. This time the light was out and a grim dawn was stealing down the side streets. On the corner was a heap of bolts and nuts and the owner was trundling his metal wheelbarrow down the street for another load to add to the heap.

More sleep was impossible.

After breakfast we found our car intact and waiting primly on the sidewalk. But the car across the way—well, the dim figure of the early morning had taken the spare tire and the headlights, had jimmied the door and appropriated mirror, clock and the gearshift handle.

They had told that new fellow, the doctors insisted, that he should stay on his side of the street and he had laughed.

* * *

The streets outside were boiling with activity. Basement stores were belching forth piles of miscellaneous merchandise on the sidewalks. Outdoor stands were improvised out of crates and everything, from brass andirons to fresh fish, placed on them. The sellers hawked their wares in varying stages of English and bickered among themselves in a dozen different tongues.

We were swept headlong into the whirlpool of humanity in the center of the street, tossed out into an eddy by a stand and dragged in again by the crowds. There were Persian rugs and second-hand suits, fat fish and freshly baked bread, limburger cheese and Oriental perfume. Noise floated around us and all the odors of the world were held in one street. Three geese tied to a pickle keg honked at us, and the woman at the fish stand yelled above the clamor.

I stopped because the crowd paused and I couldn't help myself. I was near a stand heaped with brass articles. I picked up a tiny bell. It had a pleasant tinkle, light and high and far away.

A woman with the face of a gnome told me the price. I didn't want a brass bell, even if it were $2.50, and said so. She looked horrified.

"One seventy-five," and I still didn't want it. I was trying to see my friends through the crowd and must have missed the next few prices, for when I heard her again it had dwindled to 75 cents. Then I saw them cross the narrow street and tried to make my way over. A firm hand on my arm held me back and the bell woman was pushing a clumsily wrapped bundle at me. She closed my hand around it as I slipped through a gap and across the street.

I was a little frightened when I reached a clear space and more than a little out of breath. I explained what had happened and held out the package as evidence.

They laughed.

"You were the first customer of the week. If you had gone away without the first thing you looked at on her stand, it would have brought her bad luck all the week; so she gave it to you."

We went on and out into a wider street, empty in the sunlight of that Sunday morning, and as we walked my brass bell tinkled in its newspaper wrapping.

On Saying Nothing.

IN SHARP CONTRAST to our own Dale Carnegie and the Advertising Club of New York, which has announced a similar and, apparently, a rival course in public speaking, Gen. von Unruh, of the Nazi army, has seriously advocated special training for the German nation in the lost art of keeping quiet. The general's purpose is to prepare a whole people to keep a still tongue, and he speaks of silence as a science.

PEGLER.

Mr. Carnegie, on the other hand, has taught thousands of bashful Americans to rear up in meeting and break the chains of reticence, and his friend Lowell Thomas, president of the Advertising Club, writes: "Nothing places one ahead of other men so quickly or surely as the ability to address an audience effectively."

Although Mr. Carnegie and the Advertising Club both disclaim any intention to create orators, there is reason for fear that they are giving medicine more dangerous than they know.

• • • •

THE ORATOR begins with no more sinister purpose than to wow them at the first meeting of the sales organization of the neighborhood improvement league, but it is an established fact that in too many cases once a man or woman has heard the sound of his own voice from a flag-draped desk or soap box thereafter when he opens his lips let no dog bark. As a result, the national political conventions in this country have become horrors of incoherent braying and mooing, and the process of nominating Presidential candidates is now the most humiliating incident of the operation of this democracy.

The temptation to sound off is so great that at this moment many persons with nothing to add to the controversy between Frank Hague and the C. I. O. are feeling themselves to be personally persecuted and their constitutional rights to be denied because they wouldn't be allowed to orate in Jersey City if they were in Jersey City, although they happen to be in Sausalito, with no means of getting to Jersey City.

Nazi Germany has never yet produced an idea which could be wholly indorsed by any believer in freedom, but there is something about Gen. von Unruh's proposal which arouses a faint wish to agree.

The trouble with his suggestion is twofold. It would continue to suppress all dissenting opinion and train the German nation to admire docility toward things which not even all the oratory that beats against the ears of Americans could adequately condemn. And it excepts from its provisions the very men, such as Hitler and Goebbels, whose silence in times past might have saved civilization and whose silence, starting now, might restore it.

On second thought, I am afraid I must admit that I did Frank Hague a slight injustice in commenting on his speech against the C. I. O., for I said, in effect, that no worse speech had ever been heard. That calls for a finer decision than any man should undertake to reach off-hand.

• • • •

IT WAS a powerful bad speech, but that it outawfuled many orations which are to be heard in Congress and the State legislatures, in the national conventions and in citizens' rallies just as routine oratory is not to be decided by one person's casual judgment. It was no worse, in fact, than a speech by Mr. Hague himself at the last Democratic convention in Philadelphia, which concluded with the remark: "I thank you, my friends, for the privilege of listening to Frank Hague, Mayor of Jersey City."

Yet it is to be doubted that Mr. Carnegie or the Advertising Club of New York can improve the quality of public address merely by submitting patients to a course of hazing or embarrassment and thus teaching them to overcome the natural reluctance of the normal human critter to bring up his voice and let it resound.

The question still remains whether he has anything to say that hasn't been better said before. And the danger still exists that, having learned to resound, he will do so at great length and with gestures and a class-taught repertoire of scowls, sneers, leers and condescending smiles for no other reason than to strut his accomplishment. Oratory should not ask that.

If I might chance a suggestion it would be that Mr. Carnegie and the Advertising Club of New York arrange an exchange of professors with the Nazis, ours to teach the German people to use a voice too skilled already in the art of silence and theirs to instruct our irrepressible windjammers in the art of saying nothing in no words.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

If We Ever Had To Vote On War.

("Advocates of defeated Ludlow resolution declare they will renew fight later."—News item.)
(After Felicia D. Hemans.)

The boy stood on the burning deck.
Whence all but him had fled;
The flames that lit the battle's wreck
Had left him nearly dead.

"I'd like a little help," he chirped
In quite a plaintive note;
"Stick to the deck," his country burped,
"We'll have to take a vote!"

The flames rolled on; it looked like war,
But, still, he couldn't know;
The folks back on that distant shore
Must vote that it was so!

He called aloud, "Assistance, please!
I need it right away!"
The answer read, "Oh, be at ease
Until election day!"

He cried, "The foe has sunk the fleet
Or run it on the rocks;"
"Don't worry," came the answer sweet—
We have the ballot box!"

The deck was getting hotter; it
Was naught but flaming logs;
It was so hot he couldn't sit,
But stood on two hot dogs.

"This is the third attack this week,"
He cried, "by foes galore;
Though out of turn I would not speak,
It looks to me like war."

The War Department yelled,
"But we cannot be certain till
A referendum's held!"

The bombers came and bombed some more
"They will not know that this is war,"
They laughed, "until they vote."

Then came a burst like thunder; pray,
The boy—oh! where was he?
Ask of the winds that far away
With timber strewed the sea.

Correct.

What Henry Ford wants to do with the N. L. R. B., obviously, is to take the knocks out of it.

Skip It!

Cheer up, Budget—
Don't you cry!
You'll be balanced . . .
You will my eye!

A recent ban on car parking in midtown New York has brought a grave crisis into the lives of those fellows who like to lean on an automobile while holding a sidewalk argument.

Uncle Sam is spending at the rate of $13,450 a minute. And there are still plenty of people who think he's a tightwad.

Two Chinas

Observer Foresees Day When Japan And Russia Will Strike Sparks On Mainland; Silk Boycott Possibilities.

By Livingston Hartley,
Special Correspondence of The Post.

A NEW YEAR finds Japan at the crossroad. Her conquering armies may go farther into China, higher up the Yangtze and southward to Canton, or may be content instead to consolidate their gains. Her government may prove able to negotiate a peace with Chiang Kai-shek, or may have to set up a puppet regime supposed to speak for China in the face of a relentless guerrilla war waged by the real Chinese government. But whatever happens, short of a sudden collapse of Japan and her military machine, certain facts and tendencies are becoming apparent in eastern Asia.

There have in the past been three great nations actually "resident" in the Far East—Japan, Russia and China. In the future, for the purposes of power politics, there are going to be only two. This is a change of great significance, since antagonistic rival powers are more liable to collide when only two of them divide the end of a continent.

Before the birth of "Manchukuo," China proved an effective buffer between Japan and Russia. The Red army was not impressive in Asia; Siberia felt safe, as did Japan and Korea, and all was relatively quiet along the Amur.

Japan's ambitious generals changed all that. They eliminated the Manchurian buffer that had formerly cushioned friction with Russia, created a common frontier and forced the Kremlin to concentrate there more than 200,000 men. They then felt insecure themselves, so called for progressively greater military appropriations and further conquests in China to improve their strategic position.

Uncertainties In China Have Served As Restraints.

BUT CHINA still exerted a restraining influence upon Tokyo and Moscow, because neither could be certain how she would react if they engaged in a duel. Chiang Kai-shek had for nearly ten years fought "Communists" and Soviet influence in China, yet had lately begun to show a growing hostility toward Japan. The fact that Nanking, despite its military weakness, might have held the balance in another Russo-Japanese war riddled with imponderables the staff plans of each side. The present defeat and partial disintegration of China changes this situation fundamentally.

Some military circles feared in October that Japan was preparing to continue her North China offensive into Outer Mongolia and utilize her military concentrations and expansive momentum to settle accounts with Russia while the Soviet Union was partially paralyzed by political purges.

This fear has proved unfounded, perhaps because of the unexpected resistance of China's armies. It is now believed that Japan intends to postpone a clash with Russia until she has consolidated her conquests in China. And there is no indication now that this postponement will be prevented by Moscow, where military and industrial disorganization and the German menace in the west impel the Kremlin to avoid an imminent war with Japan.

The future prospects for a stable Far Eastern peace, however, are far from rosy. China has virtually disappeared as an effective buffer between the two historic enemies. Instead of China, which might have held the balance, we are apparently going to see two Chinas, each controlled or influenced by one of these enemies. Their troubled frontier is going to be extended, for the purposes of power politics, across Mongolia and south to Tibet.

The China subject, or potentially subject, to Japanese control is far the more impressive. It includes already the five northern provinces and the lower Yangtze Valley. It can include, if the Japanese army desires, the rest of the Chinese southern coastal provinces.

This area contains some 200,000,000 people, over 42 per cent of all Chinese, as well as the most advanced and developed sections of the country. In it are China's greatest iron reserves and 72 per cent of her coal production. It provides, moreover, a virtual strangle-hold on China's communications with the outer world, since it includes the entire coast and the mouths of the three great river systems.

Japanese Victory Today Will Turn China To Moscow.

IF THE REST of China remains hostile to Japan, it will find all its sea and its principal land communications with the west cut off. The northeast outlet into Manchuria and the trade routes across Mongolia are already blocked. Communications with French Indo-China can be either closed or constantly interrupted. This leaves no outlet except precarious caravan routes across the Gobi Desert or through the mountains and Sinkiang.

It is evident, therefore, that if Chiang Kai-shek continues his resistance, he will have to depend more and more upon Russia, both for arms and an economic outlet. Such a situation points to a rapid replacement of American and European influence in China by Russian and Japanese.

Meanwhile, the strategic position in eastern Asia will have been radically altered. If Japan can consolidate her hold over eastern China, as her economic strangle-hold on it indicates is probable, she will have greatly improved her position for a war with Russia.

Such a war would then seem inevitable, with the chances far more than even that Japan would emerge as the owner of eastern Siberia. But even such a victory would not point to permanent Russo-Japanese peace. Any new artificial frontiers that are drawn across Siberia will become inevitably the scene of friction, tension and manifold causes for recurring clashes. Since the Japanese could not win their way to Moscow, the only basis for permanent peace would appear to be the final defeat of Japan and her forced withdrawal from the interior of Asia.

Prospect Discouraging For Interests Of America.

THE PROSPECT is not a pleasant one for America. It indicates that we shall face across the Pacific an instable and explosive Asia for as far ahead as we can see, and that these conditions at one end of the Eurasian Continent will preclude any real political stability in its other Atlantic end. We are also slated to lose most of our commerce and influence in China, and, unless Japan collapses or reverses her present policies, find our Pacific problems becoming progressively more dangerous.

Yet our Government, apparently, is not going to do anything about it. It is building up the Navy in order to be able to cope with the threatening conflagration when it comes. But it is making no efforts to use its predominant economic and financial power in a concerted effort to halt Japan and avert that conflagration.

It is for this reason that a popular movement to do what our Government is failing to do is of interest. The boycott of Japanese goods is now growing rapidly among many sections of our people, centered upon a refusal to purchase articles of silk, of which by far the most important are women's hosiery. How effective could a women's silk stocking boycott be as a means of pressure upon Japan?

In the year 1936 over 41 per cent of our silk imports from Japan went into women's hosiery, of which 42,000,000 dozen pairs were consumed. The silk used in stockings amounted to over 22 per cent of our total imports from Japan and some 5.6 per cent of Japanese total exports abroad.

A complete boycott of this 5.6 per cent would be a serious blow to Japan. Silk is her only major export abroad which nets a 100 per cent return in foreign exchange, and its production is a necessary means of income to one-third of her agricultural families. Its curtailment would consequently upset her already shaky balance of payments, and give rise to serious social unrest.

Such a boycott could not, by itself, halt her war machine now. But it might do much to weaken the basis for, and create opposition to, continued imperialism in the difficult period which will follow the close of major hostilities. And it is the long-range aspects of Japan's present policies which are so ominous for America.

A little research and mathematics shows the following interesting relationship between purchases of women's silk stockings in the United States and the flow of foreign exchange into bullets and bombs in Japan.

Every pair of silk stockings bought by an American woman provides Japan with enough exchange for four new rounds for her machine guns; whenever a number of American women have bought ten dozen pairs, they have furnished Japan with the means to make another aerial bomb.

No Stooges

Mussolini's Wavering Allies.

THE MEETING at Budapest this week of Italian, Austrian and Hungarian foreign ministers constitutes for the Rome government an interesting object lesson in the dangers of short-sighted opportunism.

Time was, and not so long ago either, when Austria and Hungary were tied very closely to Italy's apron strings. The Vienna and Budapest governments regarded Mussolini as their best friend abroad. They were ready to follow his lead and to do his bidding.

Without Italian support, it was felt in Vienna, Austria would speedily fall a prey to Nazi Germany. And Hungary regarded the Duce as a bulwark against the Little Entente (Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia and Rumania) and as a stanch supporter of their never-ending demands that the peace treaties be revised so as to give her back her lost lands.

• • • •

IT WAS PROBABLY a student of international politics who said that gratitude is a lively sense of future favors.

Austria has reason to be grateful to Mussolini for having mobilized a large number of Italian troops at the Austrian border when a German invasion of the Danubian state was feared in 1934. Hungary can be grateful to Italy for having befriended her when she was friendless. Both nations can thank Mussolini for the Rome protocols of March, 1934, which gave them a larger share of the Italian market.

In each case, however, the sense of gratitude is tempered by the realization that what Italy did for Austria and Hungary it did, primarily, out of self-interest.

Italian support of Austrian independence was and remains of prime importance to Italy since it preserves a useful buffer between her and an increasingly powerful Germany. And Italy's espousal of the cause of treaty revision in the Danube area, while encouraging to Hungary, was motivated by the Italian desire to have in Hungary a counter against Yugoslavia in the Adriatic and against France in central and eastern Europe.

• • • •

SINCE THE ROME protocols were signed by Mussolini, Gen. Gomboes and Engelbert Dollfuss, the European picture has altered considerably. Austria is just as anxious as ever to win outside support for her efforts to maintain her independence. Hungary is no less eager than in the past to get the peace treaties revised in her favor and to have Italy's support in that endeavor. But the situation has changed radically so far as Italy's capacity to satisfy these demands of her allies.

When Italy invaded Ethiopia she gave hostages to fortune. By antagonizing Great Britain she found it necessary to look to Germany for support. She has also found it necessary to make peace with Yugoslavia on terms decidedly favorable to that rival.

Unquestionably the Rome-Berlin axis has had its undoubted nuisance value to Mussolini. It has enabled him to swing the ax over the heads of British and French statesmen. But it also has weakened his position in Austria, since the impression developed in Vienna that Italy was sacrificing Austria to win German support in the Mediterranean.

This impression was certainly not weakened in any particular by the suggestion made by Mussolini's principal journalistic mouthpieces some months ago that Chancellor Schuschnigg include some Austrian Nazis in his cabinet.

On the other hand, the agreement made by Italy with Yugoslavia necessarily weakened Italy's ardor for the revision of the peace treaties. In fact, following this agreement, Mussolini was compelled to urge Magyar statesmen to cease their clamor regarding the ill-treatment of the Magyar minority in Yugoslavia.

• • • •

IT IS NOT surprising, then, that during the last year the relations between Austria and Italy on the one hand and Hungary and Italy on the other have been far less cordial than in the past.

To an increasing degree, in fact, both Danubian nations have been looking over various paths of retreat from Rome. With that in mind, they have become more friendly with Czechoslovakia. For another, they have tended to look more and more to London and Paris in an effort to reduce their dependence on Italy without at the same time falling into Hitler's lap. And the plan of a Danubian economic federation has increasingly attracted them.

So far as they are concerned, the Rome accord still has its value. They have no intention of scrapping it. But in and of itself they regard it as no longer sufficient for their needs. In particular, they are not in the least willing to play Italy's game without very ample compensations.

• • • •

BUT ITALY has no further compensations she can offer them. It cannot open up more markets to them. It cannot take too strenuous a stand in favor of the maintenance of Austrian independence without weakening the Berlin-Rome axis. And it cannot espouse Magyar revisionist ideas any longer, without endangering its new-found friendship with Yugoslavia and destroying the possibility that Rumania, under the pro-Fascist and Pro-Nazis Octavian Goga, will move into the Fascist camp.

Not surprisingly, therefore, both Austria and Hungary are decidedly lukewarm to Mussolini's suggestion they follow his lead in three matters. (1) That they join the anti-Communist agreement of Italy, Germany and Japan which the democratic powers view with unfeigned hostility; (2) that they withdraw from the League of Nations which on more than one occasion saved both nations from bankruptcy, and (3) that they recognize Franco. But things are not going any too well with Franco at the moment, despite the vast assistance he has received from Italy and Germany.

That is why, despite the ardor of banquet phrases being mouthed at Budapest by the representatives of the Rome pact powers, it is difficult to disguise that they are essentially meaningless.

In winning an empire in East Africa, Mussolini has definitely lost the hold he once had in central Europe. It is proving to be a dubious exchange.

Marijuana Menace

By Atty. Gen. Beck of Kansas

Cheapest Drug.

THE DANGEROUS narcotic drug marijuana grows wild in most every State in the Union and therefore is easily obtainable. Not only does it grow in the countryside, but along the roadsides and in the vacant lots of our cities as well. In many cities its presence was first discovered when health officials surveyed vacant lots in a drive to destroy ragweed and other noxious plants. Because it grows in so many different places, it has become the cheapest of all drugs.

It is estimated the Narcotic Bureau of the New York Police Department in 1936 alone destroyed almost 40,000 pounds of marijuana plants, found growing within the city limits. Because of its rapidly increasing use, marijuana demands a price as high as $60 a pound.

• • • •

WHILE CITY officials have destroyed hundreds of thousands of plants, those parasitic criminals who traffic in the drug plant the seed in open lots, where it grows without the need of cultivation. Then, under cover of darkness, the weed is harvested, dried and its leaves made into cigarettes. These cigarettes are sometimes called reefers and are also known as "goof butts," "muggles," "tea," or "gage." They are bootlegged at prices ranging from 5 to 50 cents.

The drug is considered more dangerous than cocaine or opium, neither of which will grow in this country.

• • • •

MARIJUANA is the same as Indian hemp, hashish, or cannabis. Marijuana is the Mexican term. The plant was known to the Greeks as nepenthe. Its use in Egypt has been common since ancient times and has continued down to the present. The natives of Malay Peninsula while under its effect have been known to engage in violent and bloody deeds with complete disregard for their personal safety.

Tom McCarthy

More About The Forger

HE HAD told me how he worked out the simple mechanics of forging a name. And he had said that by utilizing mail stolen from unprotected boxes in apartment house lobbies, he had been able to boom the business of ordinary forgery into a $1,500 a month income. But I still couldn't get the connection.

McCARTHY.

"You'll note," he said resting his elbows on the knees of his prison-made trousers, "that I only worked a few days at the beginning and end of every month.

"There was a good reason for that. I told you that I concentrated on stealing apparently worthless bits of paper, papers the owners felt no qualms about leaving in an unlocked mailbox. Well, when I obtained auto licenses and license receipts with the State or city seal on them, I had invaluable identification.

"Sometimes, I even took lodge cards when I found them in the mail. They fulfilled the first requisite of the bogus check racket. They were identification that not one out of a hundred people question.

"When, by recognizing the long manila bank envelopes, I obtained a series of canceled checks also mailed out the first of the month, I had something more. I had the signature of a person with a bank account.

"And when, in addition, I obtained a number of his bills from the various stores—all commonplace to a mailbox around the first of the month—I was equipped and almost ready to go. I was a crook. And I'm admitting it. But don't you think somebody slipped up in leaving that stuff around for anybody in my racket that happened by?"

After I'd heard what he was able to do with the tools which had been placed in his hands by Mr. and Mrs. Average Citizen, I could see his point. Somebody had slipped up.

• • • •

"BESIDES the canceled checks, identification cards and first-of-the-month bills from the stores, I needed one other item before I could go to work. But that was the easiest of the lot to obtain.

"Banks aren't supposed to pass out blank checkbooks without good reason. But, when I was arrested I had more than a hundred checkbooks from as many different banks in my possession.

I got them for the asking. Taking advantage of the noon hour rush, I'd breeze into a bank and ask for a checkbook. I'd choose a name so common that it was almost certain there would be a depositor of that name.

" 'Can you give me a checkbook for Mr. Williams?' I'd ask. 'He wanted me to pick one up for him on my way back from lunch.' It worked almost every time.

• • • •

"WHEN it came right down to 'pushing the paper,' as we call it down here, I varied my routine. But in general the procedure was pretty much the same. I had one line which I worked constantly.

"First, using a checkbook picked up in a nearby town, I'd make out a number of checks for $50 to one Mrs. W. M. Smith, signed by her husband, Dr. Smith. Then I'd forge the indorsement of her name on the back, getting her signature from the canceled checks I'd taken from her mailbox. That would be the signature on file at the store where the account was held in her name.

"Then I'd approach the store, with their monthly statement to Mrs. W. M. Smith. Sometimes without any explanation, except that my aunt had sent me down to pay a bill, I'd offer the $50 check, in payment for a $12 bill.

"The forged indorsement would be checked with their records and returned as O. K. I'd pay Mrs. W. M. Smith's bill, and receive the change for a worthless 50-buck check.

"I went from store to store, using the racket on as many merchants as had bills in her mailbox the day I called.

"Of course I had to dress and act so as not to excite suspicion. I wore a collegiate sweater with an emblem on the front. And I had to act the part in talking to the girls in the cashier cages. And right there is one of the weakest points in even some of the big business establishments.

"I've had a chance to see this thing from the criminal side of the fence. And businessmen with brains enough to make money act like amateurs half the time in putting inexperienced girls at their credit desks.

"You can't put an ordinary, inexperienced girl in the cashier's cage and expect her to detect a bogus check racket that somebody has spent years in figuring out. Maybe you'll think I'm trying to tell a tall one; but, actually, I worked the same check gag on the same cashier in a Southern town, twice within a six-month period. That's not even good sense—much less good business.

• • • •

"BUT the banks weren't too smart, either. There's where the athletic sweater and an identification or lodge card from somebody's mailbox paid the dividends.

"I'd make out a check to one John Royal, signed by R. F. Royal, presumably his father. Then I'd forge an indorsement using the name of the same Mrs. Smith whose bills I'd paid with worthless checks.

"I'd breeze in with the story that my aunt, Mrs. Smith, had indorsed my allowance check from my dad. And calling the cashier by the name on the sign over his window, I'd tell him that 'Aunt Anna' had said that he'd cash my check.

"Normally, that didn't excite suspicion. He'd ask for identification and I'd produce the lodge cards and license cards of one John Royal of a town 200 miles away, the same town in which the bank, upon which the check had been drawn, was located.

"They always paid off. I was never apprehended in a bank.

"Keep this in your head, though. I'm not bragging. I'm the champ sucker. I played the public and they lost. But I lost, too. In three years in the racket, I was arrested once. That was all they needed.

"I'm here at Lorton for from three to nine years. And when I get out, I won't have a penny to show for it. The only thing I'll have will be a prison record and a hell of a lot of wasted living."

And when he mentioned his prison sentence, he neglected to add that detainers were waiting to pick him up at the moment of his release. And they might mean new sentences and additional time.

But, as he said, "putting the check-pushers in prison won't break the racket." The public has the chance to do that just by using care and common sense.

Discord Is Rife Over Farm Bill, Says Chairman

Conferees 'in Mess,' Warns Smith, Blaming Agriculture Officials.

By the Associated Press.

Chairman Smith (Democrat), of South Carolina, yesterday said the Senate-House conference committee trying to agree on a farm bill was "in a mess." He blamed the Department of Agriculture for aggravating discord.

The conferees—seven from the Senate and five from the House—have been sparring almost two weeks about conflicting drafts of an "ever-normal" granary bill. Their job is to prepare a new crop-control program from the separate measures adopted by both branches at the behest of President Roosevelt during the recent special session of Congress.

"Everything in a Mess."

"So far," Smith said, "we have settled nothing of importance and even today everything is in a mess."

When he called the special session Mr. Roosevelt urged speedy enactment of a national agricultural act which could be put into effect for 1938 crops.

"The public might as well know," Smith added, "that these bills were ill-digested—that they were not thought out in all particulars.

"It is only fair to tell the whole country that the conference committee is struggling with the most incomprehensible farm bill that has ever been before Congress."

The veteran of a double decade of farm relief legislation spoke informally, asserting officially for the first time that Secretary Wallace was taking a direct hand in shaping conference decisions.

Wallace Taking Hand.

Senator Pope (Democrat), Idaho, coauthor of the Senate bill, said that so far as he knew Wallace had not tried to influence the conferees.

"The conference committee," Smith said, "is supposed to consider only matters in the two bills, but numerous amendments and suggestions from the Department of Agriculture for changes not in either bill constantly cause discord.

"Both bills are so inadequate that these changes probably improve the proposed program, so what can we do?"

Senator McGill (Democrat), Kansas, coauthor with Pope, conceded progress was slow, but said the committee could claim definite achievements.

Hispanic Room To Be Created In U. S. Library

Will House Collections Representative of Latin Countries.

President Roosevelt's good-neighbor policy is about to invade the domain of international intellectual relations, Dr. George Putnam, librarian of the Library of Congress, disclosed yesterday in his annual report to Congress.

One of the larger galleries of the main building, he said, is about to be changed into a Hispanic room to house the library's collections representative of the culture of countries south of the Texas border to Patagonia, and of Portugal and Spain.

Gift Was Anonymous.

The development was made possible by a gift of an anonymous donor, Dr. Putnam said.

The room will be transformed into a Spanish interior, following designs drawn by Paul P. Crete, of Philadelphia, architect of the Folger Shakespeare Library, the Pan American Union and the Federal Reserve Building.

Its collections as of last July included 5,395,044 books and pamphlets, 1,376,801 maps and views, 1,168,584 volumes and pieces of music and 140,851 prints, besides manuscripts too numerous to list.

Other Gifts Cited.

"No other library is known to perform services so numerous or diversified, or to reach so wide a public," the report stated.

Among other gifts to the library cited by Dr. Putnam were the papers of Alexander H. Stephens, relative to the Confederacy and donated by Bernard M. Baruch, and the original manuscript of Shelley's "Mask of Anarchy," presented by Mrs. James Laidlaw and her daughter, Mrs. Dana Backus.

Are Newspapers Fair to the Roosevelt Administration?

The press has been criticised as "fostering a fear psychology" and with being unfair to the Roosevelt Administration. The GALLUP POLL has surveyed the entire country on this issue and in The Post tomorrow (on page 2) you can learn what newspaper readers think. The report covers readers of weeklies as well as dailies. The GALLUP POLL tomorrow also gives the lawyers' choice for a successor to Justice Sutherland.

The Gallup Poll now appears in The Post every Wednesday, Friday and Sunday.

Woman Denies Wife-Swapping Story of Mate

By the Associated Press.

Salem, Mass., Jan. 12.—Mrs. Raymond S. Lee today denounced as "a pack of lies" her husband's testimony at a double divorce trial that he and Calvin Watson, a friend, on occasion had swapped wives.

Questioned by Probate Judge Edward B. O'Brien and her attorney, she made blanket denials of testimony given yesterday and today by her chauffeur-husband.

Stayed All Night.

Lee, returning to the stand, testified that when he and his wife first called at the Watson home they stayed all night. On another occasion, when visiting Mrs. Lee's mother, the witness said her stepfather warned her to choose between Lee and Watson.

Mrs. Lee's reply, Lee testified, was that she would "rather have Burlap and live" with Watson.

Recalled to the stand, Watson denied Lee's testimony that he ever had taken Mrs. Lee to Maine.

Suspicions Aroused.

Mrs. Lee told the court she had known Watson before she married Lee ten years ago. Her suspicions concerning Mrs. Watson and Lee were aroused, she said, two months before detectives found them together last April.

The pretty young wife, now employed as a domestic, told Judge O'Brien that when detectives found her husband alone with Mrs. Watson he had no shirt on and there was lipstick on his face.

Writer Predicts War With Japan Likely in a Year

War with Japan within a year was predicted by Ray Tucker, Washington political commentator and writer, before the Silver Spring (Md.) Lions Club at a meeting held at the Indian Spring Country Club.

Tucker said that perhaps the United States may only be involved in an economic or naval blockade. He based his statement on three points, namely, the indication of the Administration's attitude on foreign affairs; second, the vigorous policy of our punishment of Japan in the Panay disaster, and third, on the basis of the economic outlook in the country for the next few months.

Capt. William Bullis, chairman of the club's charity ball, announced that the affair will be held February 25.

Medical Program For Poor Mapped

Chicago, Jan. 12 (AP).—The American Medical Association tonight announced a program aimed at furnishing adequate medical care for the poor.

An editorial in the association's journal reported many plans had been evolved in various localities under the leadership of county medical societies to provide medical service for "the indigent and those partially able to pay."

Mrs. Ryan Drops Suit As Drug Clerk Settles

Morganton, N. C., Jan. 12 (AP).—A charge of nonsupport of an illegitimate child, brought by Mrs. Basil (Pat) Ryan against Ned A. Parks, Washington soda dispenser, was dismissed in Burke County court today after Parks' attorney informed the court that "a satisfactory financial settlement" had been made.

Parks, 24-year-old former Morganton youth, was arrested on a warrant sworn out by Mrs. Ryan about a month before her marriage to the copper fortune heir.

Air Crash Suit Dropped.

Kansas City, Jan. 12 (AP).—United States District Attorney Maurice Milligan announced dismissal today of a case filed against transcontinental & Western Air Lines, Inc., after a plane crash near Macon, Mo., in 1935 in which Senator Bronson M. Cutting, of New Mexico, and four other persons were killed.

Army Lacks Pilots, Air Parley Finds

Cleveland, Jan. 12 (AP).—A four-day study by leaders in the business on ills of American flying closed here today with emphasis on two conclusions:

That the Army Air Corps lacks airmen to pilot its increasing fleet of warplanes and that civil aviation has too many fliers for available airplanes.

The First National Aeronautic Planning Conference resolved to mend the situation by supporting induction of civilians into military aviation through reserve lists.

Six Killed, 65 Injured In Yugoslav Race Riot

Beard Must Go Back to Atlanta, Ashurst Says

after the classification boards at both Atlanta and Lorton agreed that it was the proper thing to do on the basis of the men's records and the facilities available. The law and regulations governing the transfer of prisoners were complied with in every detail. The transfer, in this sense, was entirely legal and proper."

Hazen Incensed.

Ray L. Huff, superintendent of D. C. Penal Institutions, whose department is directly under the Board of Public Welfare, Friday authorized return of the notorious District gambler in an "exchange of Federal prisoners" from the Atlanta Penitentiary.

Commissioner Hazen, incensed over the "entire affair," said he was aware of the "possible danger that might result with having Beard this close to the District of Columbia."

Beard was one of 13 inmates at the Federal institution at Atlanta who were brought to the Lorton Reformatory after they had been termed by the classification committee there as "medium custodial."

Justice Plea Planned.

This was explained as meaning that the prisoners were well behaved and probably could be handled adequately at the "wall-less" Lorton. Huff sent 15 inmates of the reformatory to Atlanta Prison because "we do not have the proper facilities to cope with these men who have presented difficult custodial problems."

In the meantime Dr. James A. Nolan, director of the Washington Criminal Justice Association, prepared to request the Department of Justice to send Beard back to Atlanta.

Fear was widespread yesterday that Beard would strive shortly to recapture his control of Washington gambling through communications with the Capital's underworld.

Huff explained that visitors to any prisoner at the reformatory must be known to the guards and he expected no trouble in this respect.

Dunn, N. C., Jan. 12 (AP).—Sheriff W. E. Salmon today announced a man booked as T. G. Warren, of Washington, N. (Daddy) Browning estate in New York.

It was understood De Valera would raise the question of steps toward union of Ireland and Northern Ireland—his chief ambition, but one which Northern Ireland has resisted steadfastly.

The question of defense long has been troublesome because of British maintenance of naval stations at Cork and Donegal, and her refusal to allow Ireland her own navy.

De Valera always has made it a point that Ireland could not be expected to mobilize forces "when our independence is interfered with by occupation of certain of our ports."

Naval Bases in Dispute.

When the new Irish constitution took effect last December, influential sources suggested it was time to settle Anglo-Irish political grievances, abandon British naval bases in Ireland and make defense a matter of common concern.

De Valera has hinted in that event he would be willing to pledge Irish resistance to an attempt by any power to use Ireland as a base for attacking Britain.

In addition to De Valera—once under a British death sentence—the Irish delegation will include Sean Lemass, minister of industry, who was imprisoned at the age of 17 in the Easter rising in 1916; Sean MacEntee, minister of finance, and Dr. James Ryan, minister of agriculture.

It was learned that talks have been in progress among trade officials for the last two weeks. It was hoped these would lead evetually to a comprehensive Anglo-Irish trade agreement and end a costly and bitter trade war begun in 1932.

At present there is only a coal and cattle pact between the two countries, with high tariff barriers against most other goods.

Opposition Cheers.

Dublin, Ireland, Jan. 12 (AP).—Prime Minister De Valera tonight announced in the Dail that delegations from Ireland and the United Kingdom would open conversations in London Monday aimed at settlement of outstanding issues between them.

Collins said that the budget plan will be reported to the House January 24 or 25 under present plans.

New York, Jan. 12 (AP).—Edward Du Souchet, 46, of Tenafly, N. J., a free lance artist, voluntarily accompanied two United States Secret Service agents to New York headquarters today for questioning in connection with an alleged scurrilous attack on President Roosevelt.

Employers closed the port last Wednesday noon in a dispute with longshoremen over unloading of cargoes. The disputed points will be submitted to a labor relations committee, M. G. Ringenberg, manager of the employers' association, said.

Next they went to a nearby filling station at Benning road and Twenty-sixth street, which they had visited two nights earlier.

As the bandit car drove up, Millard Brickerd, 27, of Chillum, Md., walked out to meet it.

"Beat it back in there where you came from and get us some money," one of the men said, as they both got out and drew guns. They staggered drunkenly and reeked of alcohol, Brickerd told police.

"How did your boss like the holdup the other night?" asked one.

"Not very well," answered Brickerd.

Next the gunmen hastened to Southwest Washington, where they concentrated on grocery stores.

At 319 First street southwest they stopped in front of a store operated by Louis Hillman and his wife, Hinda. Inside also were two colored customers.

Customer Threatened.

"This is a holdup, see," he said. Hellman opened the cash drawer and the robber scooped up $45—the day's receipts. He then turned his gun on one of the colored customers.

"You got any money?" he asked.

The customer said he had a quarter.

"Do you work for a living?" asked the gunman.

"Yes," answered the customer.

"Keep it then," replied the robber.

Family Foils Them.

Quick-wittedness on the part of Mrs. Fannie Litman, her husband, Ban, and her son, Robert, foiled the gunmen when they invaded the Litmans' store at 337 Third street southwest. The Litmans were in their back living room when one of the men lurched in, gun in hand. Mrs. Litman, thinking a customer was coming, stepped into the store. As soon as she saw the pistol, she screamed and fled to the back room again.

Her husband and son snapped out the lights and slammed the door, locking it. The bandits got no loot there.

Abraham Butt, 30, proprietor of a grocery at 831 Sixth street southwest, was a target for the bandits' blazing guns when they tried to rob him.

He was in a back room getting something for two customers. When he came back, he saw the customers with their hands in the air, and one of the robbers brandishing his gun. Butt was wearing a white apron. When he saw the gun he began to run. Before he could move the bandit fired at him point-blank and then shot again as he fled without loot.

Next the gunmen drove to the southeast. At 53 D street they entered a District Grocery Store operated by Morris Bassin.

Winding up their swift spree of crime, the robbers went to 36 D street southeast, another grocery, where they held up Grove Dare, 20, and stole $15 in bills.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 2 pounds of waste.

Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

An excess of acids or poisons in your blood, when due to functional kidney disorders, may be the cause of nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Husband Is Supporting Woman Chance-Met in Park; Wishes to Marry Her; Wife Asks Advice.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Here is my story in brief: My husband and I are in our late forties. We have no children, as my husband "couldn't stand noisy children." We came here from a Midwestern city on the crest of the New Deal, and my husband has a Government job at a moderate salary. We have been married 16 years, and have been happy and congenial together, trying to get as much out of life as possible, in an orderly and decent manner.

* * * *

Just about six months ago my husband met by chance in one of the city parks a destitute young mother and her child of 4. She told him a sad story. Her husband had gone away with someone else, leaving her destitute. She and the child were hungry. He gave her money for food. A few days after this, he told me about the incident and said he had met her again that day. I suggested that both of us get acquainted with her and help her as much as we could; but he said that would not be necessary, as she was leaving the city in a day or so to make her home with folks in the South. I thought nothing more of the incident and made no other inquiry about it.

* * * *

Then, a few weeks ago, I learned she had not left the city at all; that she has remained here, and that my husband has been seeing her and contributing quite generously to her support. This, of course, he had kept secret from me. He has even shared with her certain savings carefully set aside for "old age." She knows he is a married man. My husband admits they "are crazy about each other and cannot be separated."

* * * *

He has asked me to leave my home, to get out "on my own," to give him his release. In other words, I am asked to "please fade out of the picture." Naturally I have refused to do this. I feel that I am entitled to something more than that. He tells me I am "all wrong entirely" for refusing to go, and that he is doing a very noble thing in providing a home for a good mother and her child. I have tried in every way to change his mind, but it's absolutely useless.

* * * *

What is your advice? Perhaps this young woman is not to blame. After all, she was destitute and hungry. But what is it that comes over a perfectly sane man after he is 45 years of age that makes him go "completely haywire," as we say out West? Right now, there are times when he acts like an insane person. He hasn't read a book or a newspaper or said a pleasant word around the house for months. As I see him (after knowing what a fine fellow he once was) he is a most pathetic figure, and I feel that I must help him, even though he refuses to be helped. I am quite humiliated over the whole thing and would appreciate your frank advice. Gratefully, WIFE.

Don't Yield Position.

DEAR WIFE: It seems to me you have shown real common sense, intuitive wisdom and commendable self-restraint in dealing with the situation so far. In taking the attitude that your husband is out of his senses for the time being, and therefore more to be humored and pitied than reviled, it seems to me you have done just about all you can do to keep the marriage afloat. I think you are justified, from every point of view, in refusing to "fade out of the picture" and turn your home and husband over to an unscrupulous interloper, whose ethics and tactics seem to be those of a woman of the streets.

* * * *

Although willing, for the most part, to give everybody the benefit of the doubt, I am not to be easily convinced that this woman is a pitiable creature of circumstance who had no alternative to being supported by a pick-up acquaintance. I am entirely skeptical regarding her blamelessness for the unhappy turn of events which threatens your marriage. On the contrary, it would be my guess that she was looking for easy prey when she met your husband, and that she seized upon him as a dull-witted victim whose sympathies and emotions were ripe for exploitation. If she was, indeed, "hungry and destitute," and her child in the same deplorable condition, a park was hardly the place to look for succor, supposing she was seeking a self-respecting remedy for the situation.

* * * *

She is probably an amoral parasite, well-enough content to live by her wits, callously engaged in making a fool of your husband, vastly contemptuous of him in her heart, and ready and willing to have done with him, if, as and when she can find a juicier object of exploitation. Only a low-grade adventuress would encourage a married man in the delusion that he was "doing a very noble thing," in supporting herself and her child in an illicit arrangement. Out of very self-respect and right-minded concern for her child's moral and social well being, a higher-type woman would never commit herself to any such arrangement. She might accept financial assistance on a loan basis, in a desperate emergency, providing her motives were not misunderstood; she might gratefully accept assistance in finding employment or guidance in placing her child in good hands until she could become wholly self-sustaining, but if there was anything of the "good mother" about her, she would certainly hold herself above the level of being any man's "kept woman," be he married or single.

* * * *

Often there is a pathological basis for the ridiculous eroticism of those occasional middle-aged men who abandon a life pattern of perfect decorum to "go completely haywire" over some woman they would have laughed to scorn in their youth. Just as women pass through a period of organic change in middle life, which may adversely affect their emotional and social relationships for an indeterminate number of years, so, too, do men undergo a somewhat parallel change—parallel, at least, in its influence on their conduct. Although they may suppose that what they need is a new love interest, and a change of marriage partners, what they really need is competent medical help and self-understanding of a psychological sort.

* * * *

In the latest issue of Pictorial Review there is an article by Maxine Davis, entitled, "No Cause for Worry," which frankly discusses the whys and wherefores of that so-called "middle-aged madness" which occasionally overtakes long-time married men to the complete disruption of what had hitherto been a happy family picture. If husbands and wives are mentally prepared to adjust themselves, patiently, lovingly and understandingly, to certain inevitable changes in themselves and each other, at this time, they may emerge into greater happiness, contentment and mutual enjoyment of each other's companionship when the period of change has passed.

* * * *

If your husband could be persuaded to talk over his problem of frustrated yearning for the other woman with a doctor or psychiatrist, the latter might give him a dose of cold logic and sound scientific information which would restore him to his senses. See what you can do along that line. You might have a confidential talk in advance with the doctor, prepare him for what to expect, and then urge your husband to see the same man. You might tell your husband that you realize that situation is breaking his health, that you wish he would see a doctor, and say if the doctor prescribes divorce as the only cure for his increasing nervousness, you will give serious thought to the idea. But tell him that unless he does see the doctor, you refuse to consider any terms of his suggesting. Other than that, there isn't much you can do, except to hang on doggedly to your position as his wife, and hope that the infatuation will wear itself out in time. I have no doubt it will, eventually, and your task is to see that your home isn't broken up before that day arrives. M. H.

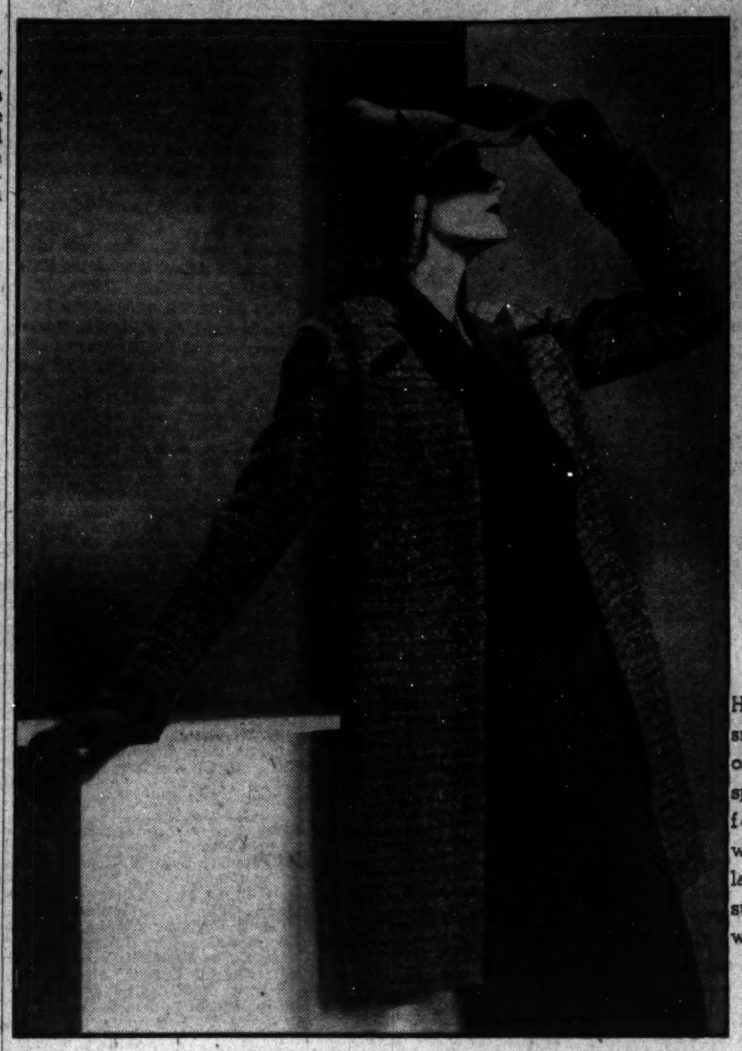
For Mid-Season Chic, the Classic Tailleur

THE SUIT below is fashioned of dark brown smooth-surfaced woolen; note long lines of coat and revers. Hat and gloves are brown. For spring, add the brown, purple and green tweed topcoat. Beige with alternate stripes of green and dusty pink is the medium for suit at right, worn by Rose Stradner, screen star; accessories are dark brown. Novelty pockets are an interesting feature.



Here are two smart versions of the classic spring tailleur, for under-coat wear now and later on, as just suits. Tailleurs will lead spring style parade!

Tailored Suit Best Investment For Both Winter and Spring

By Ethel Ehlen,

The Post Fashion Editor.

A TAILORED SUIT to wear now under your winter coat and later on in spring is one of the best midseason investments you can make. With Washington shops offering a grand selection of new spring models there should be no difficulty in choosing something distinctive and chic. The latest suits are of two classifications, mannish tailored and the new soft-tailored versions which feature longer jackets than last season, only slightly padded shoulders and long torso lines. Both are being sponsored by current fashion dictums, the choice being a matter of personal preference.

Materials are lovely and vie with styling for first place. For instance, aside from imported tweeds there are numerous domestic materials that are soft of texture and smart of pattern in the conventional brown or black and white mixtures, and those exploiting spots of bright color.

Novelty stripes, checks and zigzag designs of herringbone influence are much in evidence; also, shepherd checks in classic black and white combinations. The realm of solid colors features black, brown, gray, navy and oxford gray. There are gabardines, soft flannels, poiret twill, whipcords and mannish woolens.

Bright Suits Are Seen.

Another type of suit on the midseason fashion scene is the bright-colored or pastel-tinted affair of soft wool or tweed. These are available in alluring color tones such as pink, raspberry, violet, cloud or spruce blues, gold, soft green and warm beige. They can be worn now as a dress and later on as a spring suit. With various sweater or blouse changes, a suit of this type can take on numerous personalities.

Because a suit is usually purchased with the idea of wearing it several seasons and because suits do not change in styling as often as dresses, it is advisable to buy a good one—well-tailored and made of good material. If your budget does not allow buying a custom-made suit (made to your own measurements), then according to stylists, buy one that is nearest your size, if you are difficult to fit, and have it altered to your measurements. An improperly fitted suit is anything but smart, regardless of newness of the model and caliber of the fabric.

Suits Doubly Important.

Spring and suits have always been synonymous, but this year, according to fashion predictions and advance information from designers, suits will reach a new high in style trends. Suits will be so important, it is predicted, that fastidious women will not be satisfied with just one, but will flaunt "suit collections" in their wardrobes. The vogue is not surprising however, because suits have been slowly but surely acquiring an enviable place as an all-year costume. With the numerous and diverse accessories which can give the illusion of a more extensive wardrobe, suits are now giving dresses keen competition. The modern suit can go anywhere with fashion assurance—it all depends upon the hat, skirt topping, shoes and other accents which complete the costume.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Jan. 12.

ON A certain night recently, the direst accident might have befallen New York, and the bulk of newspaper writers and camera men would not have been there to report it. They were all out at sea to watch the luxury liner Franconia slide out on its world cruise, peopled with some of our best millionaires, (wealthy clubmen, society heiresses, scions of influential families and others who went just for the ride. What I envy these world cruisers for is not their money nor their fancy clothes, but their ability to escape, get away from it all. For five months they will not have to mull over the same old matters. There will be new situations, some not even pleasant, but what of it? This is a boatload of folks out for fun. Yes, I envy them, truly.

ALICE HUGHES.

The way they prepare for these cruises must make them feel like brides gathering a trousseau. Dresses for a whole year in advance; not a woman there had less than two dozen different dresses. Gloria Baker, gold-spoon daughter of Mrs. Margaret (Bromo-Seltzer) Emerson, had about 50 dresses, half as many hats and nearly twice as many shoes. Since these leisure-lovers occupy their suites on the Franconia for five whole months, they have something to say about decorations and equipment. I noticed that Gloria, who is partial to blue, had her own pale blue flower-sprigged sheets and cases laid on her bed. There were enough presents to furnish a surprise for every day in 1938.

Swathed in mink, Gloria and her mother bade good-by to friends come to see them off. Not too far away stood Mrs. Arthur Somers Roche and her son Jeffry. Oh, yes, they're going along. Jeffry has been Gloria's playmate in Florida, and probably will still be when they get to Africa, unless some distinguished title horns in on the party. There's no telling what our spoiled, rich American girls will do when a title comes along. But I'm counting on Gloria for better sense, for she did say, before the boat sailed, "The man I would marry hasn't been born."

GIRL ABOUT TOWN: Talking the other day to Barbara Howard, wife of Jack, the son of newspaperman Roy Howard, she surprised me by telling me she had not yet seen her sister's new baby. Her sister is Sandra Shaw, wife of Gary Cooper. Practically no one has seen the baby, said Barbara, because the Cooper family, like all prominent moving picture people, are frightened to death of kidnapers, robberies (of which there have been three since they were wed) and other invasions due to their national fame. Almost makes one glad to be just a nobody and bring one's children out into the open.

Seems that all you need to do to get noticed out of town is to wear dark glasses and resemble Joan Crawford. Fleur Fenton, shoe stylist, who wears the glasses and makes up to look like Joan, found herself followed by autograph hounds in a recent cross-country tour.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Dietetic Needs of Child.

We emphasized yesterday that the dietetic needs of the young child came under six heads: Milk, eggs, a cooked green or yellow vegetable, a raw leafy vegetable, fruits (especially orange, grapefruit or tomato), whole creal or bread.

Milk is needed for growth more than any other thing, although it is a kind of general elixir of life. For the growth of bone, the formation of teeth and the replacement of the baby teeth by the permanent set, some substances are needed more than others. Of the ones most needed calcium (lime) and phosphorus are found abundantly in whole milk. To supply the amount of calcium and phosphorus needed, the child should have one quart or four cups of milk a day, either as a drink or combined with other foods.

Eggs are necessary, because a quart of milk does not supply enough protein necessary for a growing child. They also supply Vitamins A, B and some D, and fats and iron and sulphur. One egg a day is enough, and one egg and one quart of milk a day will fulfill the basic needs of a child for body building materials.

Meat is not injurious to young children if ground or finely cut. Liver is an espeically valuable addition to the child's diet, furnishing iron, copper and vitamins and many vital substances.

The green leafy vegetables furnish roughage and valuable minerals and vitamins. Turnip, dandelion, beet leaves, chard, cabbage, endive, parsley and spinach—there are enough to suit every purse and taste.

The yellow vegetables—carrots, rutabagas, yams, squash, pumpkin and corn—are valuable because the coloring matter is a chemical which can be built up into vitamins.

Style Expert Stresses 'Open Mind' Shopping

Trial and Error Only Way to Buy Clothes, Says Miss Engelking.

THE importance of the individual over clothes and the charm and chic of simplicity were stressed in a talk given yesterday at the Institute of Social Arts by Helen Engelking, stylist of the Frank R. Jelleff store. Following closely the topic, "Styles in Dress for the Individual," Miss Engelking stated that no hard and fast rules should be laid down regarding dressing for type and for the individual silhouette. "You never know how a new color or line is going to look on you until you have tried it," she commented, "and the clothes you admire on someone else may not have the same flattering effect for you." The remedy for all of this is experimentation, a process which the lecturer recommended very highly, with the inevitable question in mind, "What does this hat, dress or whatnot do for me?"

Discussing accessories, Miss Engelking said that what you take off a dress is vastly more important than what you put on it—and if you are in doubt about adding an extra gadget of some kind, the answer always is "don't." For the basic dress or suit, one of the most important items in anyone's wardrobe, fabric should be of paramount consideration. Certain tweeds and crepes have enough interest in themselves to give style without the usual accents which add glamour and interest, she explained; other fabrics, a smooth dull crepe for instance, need jewelry or other accents to give them life.

The theme throughout the wardrobe should be naturalness, being yourself, Miss Engelking advised. If you feel that you haven't a pleasing style of your own, then emulate someone who has, she suggested—an actress from the stage or screen for example. Your clothes, she pointed out, should express the kind of life you lead, whether it is work or leisure, whether you travel or stay at home, and the extent of your social activities, this idea should always be the guidepost in buying.

Keep your sports and business clothes conventional, advised Miss Engelking, and leave the whimsies and dramatics for evening costumes. If you are compelled to budget your income, she believes that before buying anything you should subdivide the price by the number of times you feel that you will be able to wear the garment and still feel well-dressed. "A dress costing only $5 for instance," she said, "is really expensive, if it can only be worn once or twice, while a dress costing $25, that can be worn an entire season, is inexpensive by comparison." The most successful shopper she defined as the woman who sets forth with an open mind—one who is willing to try on new styles and colors to see if they are becoming, and one who will allow stylists and sales persons to offer counsel.

Scented Powder Can't Replace Soap

"Thou shalt not ever use scented powder as a substitute for soap and water."

This was the first of ten "commandments" prescribed by Mrs. Katharine Bleeker Meigs in one of a series of lectures to Hunter College students who are preparing for business careers.

Mrs. Meigs is a firm believer in soap and water cleanliness in all its aspects. In her opinion the subject cannot be overemphasized because so many young women overlook the most obvious requisites for keeping clean and well groomed. Wearing clothes made of washable fabrics, frequent bathing and washing the face thoroughly before applying make-up and creams are all important items on her list of the ABC's of business living.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

By Ida Jean Kain.

BE SMART about your slimming and don't let trifles stand in the way of your weight loss. You can control your appetite more quickly by taking less water with your meals, and you can lose weight faster by using less salt.

Probably the only time you drink water is with your meals, and that is the time you should not drink it. Water at the beginning of the meal stimulates the appetite and when taken at the end of the meal stays in the stomach and distends it. While water cannot make you fat, if it is taken with food, it does increase your food capacity.

Drink all the water you want between meals. You should have at least eight glasses a day, and as much more as you like. While you are reducing, it is important to drink plenty of water, for, as large amounts of fatty tissue are broken down, water is needed to carry off the wastes.

A good time to drink a glass of water is an hour before meals. The total amount of liquid at mealtime should not exceed 8 ounces, which is one glass. For example, with a meal that includes a cup of bouillon and a beverage no water should be taken.

Salt is another item which you are likely to take too much for granted. Are you one of those overweights who salt first and taste afterward? Then you are overlooking the fact that a low salt intake will speed your figure program. There is a definite relation between the absorption of salt by the tissues and the retention of water, and water retention delays the registration of weight loss.

Salt is a habit which grows on one and many confirmed salters go so far as to salt bananas, apples, grapefruit—in fact, everything they eat. Use less salt and you will acquire a taste for less.

People who like their food highly seasoned usually also like their meals well trimmed. Butter slips into the menu at 100 calories per pat, and the generous use of mayonnaise and French dressing turns salad into a weight-gaining dish. These "reducers" like plenty of gravy—and no half-lumps of sugar for them!

When dieting do you tide yourself over with in-between-meal calories? This sort of program does more harm and less good than almost any other, because these extras usually come very high in calories—which you forget to count.

The easiest way, however, of adding more calories than can be subtracted in a reducing diet is to have a bedtime snack. Eating at night is a difficult habit to break, but it is well worth your while.

You can crowd out your wrong habits if you develop enough good ones. Learn to taste first, then salt, and don't wash your food down with water.

Too Much Salt Is Called Detrimental to the Slim Figure.

Washington Residential, Official, Diplomatic and Service Sets Throng 'At Homes' of Mmes. Woodring, Swanson and Cummings

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

Washington society went calling by scores and hundreds again yesterday. The second round of Cabinet "at homes" drew guests in droves—not only from diplomatic and residential circles but from the Army and Navy as well.

Traffic was jammed for well over two hours around 2300 S street, the former home of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Hoover, while official and social notables thronged Mrs. Harry H. Woodring's reception. The big red brick house with its white stone portico was given a distinct military accent by soldiers, turned out in trim khaki, stationed up and down the block, and in front of the long awning stretched from the doorway to the street.

HOPE R. MILLER.

The military motif was further carried out in the entrance hall, where the flag of the United States, the flag of the Secretary of War and the flag of the Chief of Staff were prominently displayed.

The crowd of callers surging in the door was so large you had to wait fully five minutes to enter, but once in the spacious drawing room with its bright chintz curtains and big fireplace, you knew the reception was worth the struggle.

Mrs. Woodring, who is indisposed, did not receive. Substituting for her was her sister, Mrs. Donald Carpenter, of Southport, Conn. Mrs. Carpenter wore a long black velvet gown fashioned with short sleeves. A string of pearls and a corsage of gardenias completed her ensemble. Assisting her was Mrs. Louis Johnson, wife of the Assistant Secretary of War. Her black velvet costume was set off with a packet trimmed in gold and an orchid corsage. Introductions were made by Secretary Woodring's aide, Capt. William L. Ritchie.

While a detachment from the Army Band played softly in the library, guests drifted into the dining room where coffee, tea and the usual tea-time dainties were served. The long table was centered with a huge bouquet of pink snapdragons, daffodils and baby's breath. In charge of the tea table was Mrs. Thomas Ashburn. Pouring coffee were Mrs. Joseph Mauborgne, Mrs. William Pschappat, Mrs. Edgar Conely and Mrs. Stanley Embick. Mrs. John De Witt, Mrs. Walter Baker, Mrs. Allen Gullion and Mrs. Henry Gibbons poured tea. The Secretary of War, who was on hand for most of the reception, did a good job of being everywhere at once to mingle with guests.

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson Assists Mrs. Swanson

Meanwhile, a few blocks away, the Navy was showing up by dozens at Mrs. Claude A. Swanson's "at home." Diplomatic and residential Washington was also well represented in the large company that called between 4 and 6 o'clock.

Sailors from the Sequoia, Secretary Swanson's yacht, were stationed at the front and on the red-carpeted stairway leading to the second-floor drawing room, and aides in gold-braided uniforms added color to the reception. Last year so many guests attended Mrs. Swanson's January "at home" that they had to be held at the door. This year, since she has planned another reception for February, the company was not so large . . . but it was large enough to keep a continuous line of cars six blocks up and down R street for well over two hours.

The hostess, who wore a beautiful gown with black skirt and gold lame jacket, received her guests in the handsomely furnished drawing room. By her side was Mrs. Woodrow Wilson in a frock of toast chiffon and lace, set off with a wide-brimmed burgundy hat. Introductions were made by Capt. John R. Beardall, Secretary Swanson's aide. Assisting Mrs. Swanson were Mrs. George Barnett, Mrs. Mahlon Pitney, Mrs. Edgar Woods, Mrs. Ollie James, Mrs. William D. Leahy, Mrs. Frank Ridgeley, Mrs. Loren Johnson, Mrs. Mark Bristol and Mrs. Beardall.

The beautifully carved oval table in the dining room was decorated with a silver bowl filled with red roses and baby's breath, surrounded with four towering white candles. Assisting at tea and coffee urns were Mme. de Morgenstierne, wife of the Norwegian Minister; Mrs. George H. Dern, Mrs. Eldridge Jordan, the Misses Helen and Josephine Patten, Mrs. Ronald Fairfax, Mrs. Henry Latrobe Roosevelt and Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose.

Mrs. Cummings' Party Draws Host of Notables

The third "at home" of the afternoon, Mrs. Homer S. Cummings', was as big as either of the others and drew an equally large number of official and residential notables. Visiting Ruthven—the beautiful home of the Attorney General and Mrs. Cummings—even at a huge reception is a delightful experience. Parties there, even when the biggest of big-wigs are guests, are characterized by an informality rarely achieved at Washington's official affairs.

Wearing a smart green frock shot with gold thread and trimmed at the sleeves with brown fur, Mrs. Cummings received her guests in the drawing room. Assisting her, either there or at the tea table were Mrs. Harry W. Blair, in an all-black ensemble; Mrs. Hugo Black, handsomely turned out in a gray suit and hat with dubonnet accents; Miss Paulett Guffey; Mrs. Fred Britten, whose tall turban was tipped with fur and whose black frock was trimmed at the sleeves in rows of gold and green sequins; Mrs. Frank Bohn, Mrs. James W. Morris, Mrs. Knight Davies, Mrs. Gilbert Hitchcock and Miss Marguerite Le Hand.

The long dining room table, at which refreshments were served, was decorated with a tall amber centerpiece, two amber vases filled with iris and white lilacs, and flanked by four white candles in silver holders.

Guests glimpsed at one or more of the receptions included the Army chief of Staff and Mrs. Malin Craig, Senora de Espil, in a sable coat and a small wine-colored turban; Lady Marler, in a burgundy ensemble, accompanied by Mrs. Merchant Mahoney. Mrs. Laurence Houghteling, in a rust ensemble with a small hat to match, was glimpsed at one "at home;" also Mme. Marc Peter, Mme. Vladimir Hurban and Mme. Constantin Fotich.

Mme. Hirosi Saito managed to make the complete round, as did Miss Yoeh Wang; the Minister of Siam and Mme. Rajamaitri and the Minister of Panama and Senora de Boyd, Mrs. Sol Bloom and her daughter, Miss Vera Bloom; Mrs. Ralph Brewster, and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, to mention but a few at random.

Among others seen during the afternoon were Gen. and Mrs. Amos Fries, Mrs. Bruce Barton, Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, Mrs. Benton McMillan, Mrs. Edwin Meredith, Mrs. Ernest Gruening with Mrs. Edward C. Moran, jr., Maj. Gen. Allen Gullion, Mrs. Robert Fleming, Mrs. Richard Wigglesworth, Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mrs. Lewis B. Schwellenbach, Mrs. Harry H. Fulton, Col. and Mrs. Richard Newman and their debutante daughter, Miss Rosemary Newman, Mrs. George Murphy and Mrs. James Irwin.

About the Town

With Dudley Harmon

IT IS MORE than likely that summer vacations this year will be postponed by royalty-minded hostesses owing to the scheduled arrival of the Crown Prince and Princess of Sweden in June. Their trip, which will include Washington, is for the purpose of celebrating the 300th anniversary of the first Swedish colony to be located in this country. The colony was in Delaware.

The crown prince and his wife visited this country several years ago. He is interested in cultural subjects, and during his stay in New York frequently dropped in at the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

Their trip is to be arranged by Col. Oscar Solbert, who accompanied the Prince of Wales on his tour here in 1919. Col. Solbert was military attache at our embassy in London for five years and now is in business in Rochester, N. Y.

The crown prince is 55. His first wife, who was the mother of his daughter and four sons, died 18 years ago, and the present crown princess is the former Lady Louise Mountbatten, sister of the Marquess of Milford Haven; of Lord Louis Mountbatten, cousin of King George VI, and Prince Andrew of Greece. The crown prince's eldest son, Gustaf Adolph, came to New York a number of years ago to be best man at the wedding of his cousin, Count Folke Bernadotte, to Estelle Manville.

A MOST PLEASANT dinner was given last night by the Counselor of the German Embassy and Frau Hans Thomsen. The party was held at their home on Colorado avenue, near Rock Creek Park, and the ranking guests were Dmitiri Naoumoff, Bulgarian Minister, and his bride of a few months.

Frau Thomsen, who received in the long drawing room, wore a gown in changeable colors of pink and blue. In addition to the Naoumoffs, the guests included the Secretary of The Netherlands Legation and Mme. van Troostenburg de Bruyn, Dr. Jacob Gould Schurman, former Ambassador to Germany, his daughter, Mrs. James M. McHugh (her husband, a naval officer, is in China), and Baron Ulrich von Gienanth, newly arrived Attache to the German Embassy.

Dr. Schurman is an interesting man, and his many friends here are delighted that he has settled down in Washington for the winter. He has almost a dozen honorary degrees, gathered from universities all over the country, and for some time was a professor of philosophy. He has written numerous books, ranging from a volume entitled, "The Ethical Import of Darwinism," to an equally technical treatise on Philippine affairs.

FOREIGN SERVICE NEWS: Douglas MacArthur, of Washington, who has been serving as Vice Consul at Naples, has been assigned to Paris as Third Secretary of Embassy and American Vice Consul. He is the son of Gen. Douglas MacArthur and his wife is the daughter of Senator and Mrs. Alben Barkley . . . Mr. and Mrs. John Farr Simmons will not leave until next month for Ottawa, where he has been named counselor of legation. They have taken the house of Elyot Palmer, whom Mr. Simmons succeeds. Mr. Palmer will leave the middle of March for Beirut, Syria, to take the place of Theodore Marriner, assassinated there last autumn.

APPROPRIATELY artistic invitations are out for the preview of a third exhibition at the Washington Gallery of the Museum of Modern Art. This exhibition, which is of water colors by distinguished Americans, was gotten together largely under the direction of talented Mrs. Dean Acheson . . . Evidently on the theory that the showings can now attract a goodly audience under their own power, no entertainment in the form of luncheons before the preview on Sunday has been arranged . . . Mrs. Dwight Davis, chairman of the gallery, will return this week-end from her plantation at Tallahassee, Fla., and Mrs. George A. Garrett, who is vice chairman, is coming back today from New York.

Lady Bradford Leslie, who arrived at the Shoreham from New York recently, expects to remain until next Tuesday, when she will leave on a motor trip to the South and West. In San Antonio, Tex., she will be joined by Mrs. Hugh Comer, of Washington, and they will continue on to California for a long stay.

Lady Leslie has a villa at Cannes and has lived in England, but she spends most of her time traveling and shooting big game. She is the former Gertrude Ludlam, of New York, and her family is one of that city's oldest—the Ludlam will was the first ever probated there.

In April, Lady Leslie will return to the Shoreham to spend a month.

Sonja Henie Faces Busy Schedule Here

Sonja Henie, noted skater and motion picture star, will have a full schedule for her brief visit in Washington today. Arriving this afternoon she will be taken to the Norwegian Legation, where the Minister and Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne will entertain at luncheon for her.

From there she will go to the Shoreham to meet the press and to be feted at 7:30 at a buffet supper arranged by Samuel Wheeler and by Arthur De Titta, of Twentieth-Century Fox.

Following a continuous round of feting, Miss Henie will leave Washington tonight.

Returns to City.

Mrs. Frank Sprigg Perry has returned from her cottage on the Rappahannock River, where she spent the holidays, and has opened her house at 3402 Macomb street northwest.

Mrs. Roberta Lawson and Saidie Dunbar Head Reception Line As Women's Club Federation Executive Board Meeting Nears

Mrs. Reynolds Is Center of Attention Because of Marriage.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Headquarters of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, quiet during most of the year, came alive last night to the annual mid-winter reception before the meeting today of the executive board of the federation.

Mrs. Roberta Campbell Lawson, rounding out her term as president, and Mrs. Saidie Orr Dunbar, of Portland, Oreg., who comes in unopposed as her successor in May, received with other officers in the drawing room. Club women from all States of the Union were there, plus members of Congressional delegations from their States and other guests from official Washington.

Palms and ferns formed the background for the receiving line. In the hallway downstairs was a great bouquet of gladioli which had been sent by Mme. Cantacuzene, president of the League of Republican Women and prominent in many other organizations. On the table in the drawing room was a long, low bouquet of gladioli in pink and white, sent by officers of the Maryland State Federation, and elsewhere calla lilies were used in decoration. A stately bouquet of them formed the centerpiece for the table in the dining room, which was lighted with white candles in silver holders. Throughout the clubhouse were handsome furnishings which have been gifts from time to time of different State federations.

President's Corsage From State Clubwomen

Mrs. Lawson received in a striking gown of red sequins with diamond ornaments made in tailored effect with buttons from neck to hem. Her corsage, sent her by the clubwomen of her State, was of white sweet peas, lilies of the valley and freesia. Mrs. Dunbar's gown was of a delicate shade of pink lace, with rhinestone clips. Other officers receiving were Mrs. Walter W. Seymour, second vice president, who wore black lace with rhinestone ornaments; Mrs. Lafell Dickinson, treasurer, who wore black crepe with white figures and an ermine coat; Mrs. John S. Harvey, recording secretary, in ice blue satin with French flowers and pearls; Mrs. Edward Dexter Knight, chairman of the board of trustees, in black chiffon and lace, with rhinestones, and Mrs. J. L. B. Buck, chairman of budget, who wore blue velvet and diamonds.

One of the persons before whom the line moved slowly was Mrs. H. Gilbert Reynolds, of Paducah, Ky., formerly Grace Morrison Poole, an honorary president of the federation, who is here for the first time since her marriage to Dr. Reynolds in the early autumn. Later in the evening she practically held a court of her own as frends gathered around to extend their felicitations.

Mrs. John F. Sippel, another honorary president, with Mrs. W. T. Perham and Miss Florence Dibert, honorary vice presidents, also was in line, as were Mrs. Elbert W. Shirk, dean of department chairmen, and Mrs. J. L. Gibson, representative of directors.

Among early guests were Dr. Hugh Cumming, sanitary director for the Pan American Union, and Mrs. Cumming, who are close friends of Mrs. Dunbar. They returned just before Christmas from a health conference in Central America.

Among other early arrivals was Mrs. Lawson's cousin, Miss Virginia Addison, of Annapolis, president of one of the women's clubs there. She wore a simply fashioned gown of powder blue. Representative Wesley E. Disney, of Oklahoma, who is to be on the federation program Friday afternoon, and Mrs. Disney were also there.

Members of the board of trustees of the federation presided at the supper table and assisted in the dining room. They included Mrs. Emily Louise Plumley, Mrs. C. W. Hunter, Miss Alves Long, Mrs. Edith O'Keefe Susong, Mrs. Ernest M. Galloway, Mrs. Felix McWhirter, Mrs. J. D. Atwood, who is to address the Political Study Club Saturday; Mrs. Norman H. Hastings, Mrs. John L. Whitehurst, Mrs. H. S. Godfrey, Mrs. William Dick Sporborg, Mrs. J. Henry Highsmith and Mrs. Clarence Fraim.

Mrs. McWhirter had entertained at a luncheon in the afternoon at Iron Gate Inn for members of Group 4 of the board. Her guests included Mrs. Edwin F. Miller, Mrs. Frederick G. Balz and Mrs. F. I. Poston, of Indiana; Mrs. Eugene Cutler and Mrs. Eugene Henely, of Iowa; Mrs. Walter Seymour and Mrs. Edward J. Lehman, of Illinois; Mrs. Earl Padgett, of Ohio; Mrs. M. R. Keyworth and Mrs. Chapman, of Michigan; Mrs. Lawson, Mrs. Dunbar, Mrs. Buck, Mrs. Dickinson, Mrs. Edward Dexter night, of the board of trustees, and from the headquarters staff, Mrs. Josphine J. Doggett, Mrs. Thalia Woods, and Miss Vella Winner, who is editor of The Clubwoman-G. F. W. C.

Mrs. Whitehurst arrived at the reception from the dinner given by a Maryland group at the Mayflower. Among others in the party there were Mrs. Frank M. Hoadley, president of the State federation; Mrs. John F. Sippel, Mrs. John L. Alcock, Mrs. John Paul Troy, Mrs. Thomas J. Tingley, Mrs. John G. Price, Mrs. Kerner Brown, Mrs. Eileen Seaman, Mrs. John J. Kroh, Mrs. Frank A. Linzel, Mrs. Philip Gott and Mrs. J. Enos Ray.

Mrs. Edwin Bevens, chairman of rural and urban co-operation, who arranged the forum luncheon at the National Press Club yesterday, was among those present and wore a black crepe gown with a striking cape effect of red. Following the luncheon which most of them attended, they were received for tea by Mrs. Roosevelt at the White House.

Wider Interest in Music Urged By Mme. Stokowski in Talk

There can be no normal progress in music in America without a more widespread interest in it, Mme. Olga Samaroff Stokowski declared yesterday afternoon, addressing the Georgetown Visitation Convent Alumnae Association at the home of Mrs. Joseph Leiter, its president.

Mme. Stokowski, who is a dircetor of the Jailliard Graduate School in New York, conceived the idea of the layman's music course, designed to develop the understanding of music and increase popular interest in it. The convent was the first school to include the course in its curriculum about four years ago and did so largely through the influence of Mrs. Charles E. Mitchell, of New York, who at that time was president of the alumnae association. Mrs. Mitchell came from New York for yesterday's program and is a guest at the home of Mrs. Reiter.

The layman's course is taught by Miss Harriet Johnson, who conducts classes there twice a week, and is under the direct supervision of Mme. Stokowski.

In an effort to insure a hearing for the young American artist and development of his talent, Mme. Stokowski was instrumental in establishing the Schubert Memorial Foundation. The American artist for many years has suffered from a pyschological hang-over in the opinion that European success was requisite before a hearing could be gained in America, she said.

Miss Tureck, who played yesterday, was an example of the American born and American trained artist in whom Mme. Stokowski is primarily interested. She received acclaim from critics following her Town Hall recitals and has played as soloist with the Chicago, New York and Philadelphia Symphony orchestras. She has 49 Bach numbers in her repertoire, in addition to the works of other masters.

Officers of the alumnae association which sponsored yesterday's program, in addition to Mrs. Leiter, include Miss Margaret Shea, corresponding secretary; Miss Helen O'Connor, recording secretary; Miss Christabel Hill, treasurer, and Miss Eleanor Connoly, Miss Agnes Fealy, Mrs. John Edgar Murdock and Miss Nancy Ordway, members of the executive committee.

She announced the following chairmen and vice chairmen of committees: Attendance, Mrs. Ruth Baker and Mrs. Katherine Morris; auditing, Miss Lily Tyser and Miss Grace Thompson; building, Mrs. Celia Stach; by-laws, Mrs. Isabel Peterson; civics, Mrs. Edna Hoffman and Mrs. Edna Knight Gasch; social, Miss Daisy Reed and Mrs. Emily Shaw; finance, Mrs. Mary Chmylko and Miss Ella Werner; Venture Club, Miss Estelle Zirkin and Mrs. Jean Bennett; fellowship, Miss Gene Bearmore and Miss Nora Huffman; hostess to visitors, Mrs. Mary Lewis and Mrs. Lorraine Good; luncheon, Miss Mary Turner and Miss Sallie Dillard; music, Mrs. Jewell Downs and Miss Nora Huffman; membership, Mrs. Ella Hildebrand and Mrs. Jean Bennett; publicity, Miss Emma A. Buechele; program, Miss Marjorie Webster and Mrs. Constance Fogel Jones; transportation, Mrs. Nell Hysong and Mrs. Laura Waters; guest tickets, Mrs. Eva Turner, and vocational guidance, Mabel Dickson and Mrs. Marie Tedrow.

Mrs. BurkeBack From New York

'Flying Caravan' Member Addressed Mandate Group Meetings.

Mrs. Thomas Burke, who was a member of the "Flying Caravan" of the People's Mandate Committee, and Miss Mabel Vernon, director of the organization, returned last night from New York City, where they addressed a series of meetings held there by the committee.

The first was Monday night, called by the Eastern representatives of the Mandate Committee at the home of Mrs. Amos Peasley, on Fifth avenue. Officials of 150 co-operating bodies were present, and Vida Milholland presided.

Dr. Mary E. Woolley, chairman of the Mandate Committee, Mrs. Burke and Miss Vernon spoke. Both Dr. Woolley and Mrs. Burke stressed need for close co-operation with the Government in articulation of any peace activity, and pointed out that no action should be taken which would render the Secretary of State useless to the Government.

Secretary Cordell Hull is known for his love of peace. On a logical basis, Mrs. Burke pointed out, no move should be made which would tie his hands. This part of her address, warmly received by her audience, was given shortly after Congress had voted down the Ludlow war referendum measure.

Mrs. Burke also described the trip to South America of the Mandate Committee's delegates and discussed the psychological reaction of the Latin-Americans. The emergence of women from comparative obscurity has resulted in general uplift among the people, she said, and co-operation of labor and educators is another sign of progress.

Tuesday a conference of heads of women's organizations co-operating with the Mandate Committee was held to discuss means of furthering the work accomplished by the "Flying Caravan" and yesterday a large luncheon was held at Town Hall.

Harlan MILLER Over the Coffee

In the brittle, pregnant air of Washington a hint of gallantry, a touch of courtliness is like a mirage of palms in a parched land . . . So I salute those three gallant knights, Senator Lancelot, Senator Gallahad and Senator Gawain, and raise a flagon to them, the flower of American chivalry.

* * * *

They always gallop into battle with a posey on their lances, a bit of gaudy garter on their helmets . . . They punctuate their defis with mannerly jests and brave quips, and they occasionally smile and wink gravely behind their shields.

* * * *

I haven't consulted the Congressional Record, but from memory it seems that even in the heat of a bitter debate or a filibuster their discourse goes like this:

SIR GALLAHAD: And so, gentlemen, I am prepared to lay down my worthless life for the incomparable womanhood of Dixie——

SIR LANCELOT: Does the gentleman from Arizona yield?

SIR GALLAHAD: I am always happy to yield to the sagacious, the valorous, the brilliant gentleman from Texas, whose observations so illuminate and clarify the record.

SIR LANCELOT: I am but an apprentice, an acolyte, at the feet of the Senator from Arizona . . . I merely wanted to point out that the Senator from Arizona is always right.

* * * *

SIR GALLAHAD: I am grateful for the correction . . . Nowhere, except in Arizona, are the women so lovely, the men so fearless, the little tots so cute as they are in fair Texas, whose gift to the U. S. Senate——

SIR GAWAIN: Will the eloquent and irresistible Senator from Arizona yield?

SIR GALLAHAD: Even with breath still left in my body I yield eagerly to the persuasive and handsome Senator from North Carolina, whose chivalry and patriotism——

* * * *

SIR GAWAIN: I bow low to the urbane and astute gentleman from Arizona . . . I rise merely to say that the Senator from Arizona holds the fair womanhood of his State as high as I hold the fair womanhood of North Carolina, and as Senator Lancelot holds the fair womanhood of Texas, high above the turmoil of the market place, high and unsullied above the chaos and flux of national, international, domestic, interstate and intrastate affairs——

SIR LANCELOT: Does the Senator, whose lofty and invigorating words so inspire and stimulate me to add a humble jot or tittle to the debate, yield?

* * * *

SIR GALLAHAD: I yield; the voice of the Senator from Texas is like the throb of a distant violin in a boiler factory; his noble motives, his pure idealism, his manly physique——

SIR LANCELOT: The Senator from Arizona's esteem is more precious to me than golden pluralities . . . I interrupt only to imbed eternally in the Record my deep conviction that North Carolina's Senator is a gentle perfect knight, swift to succor the distressed, valiant in defense of the Republic against future perils, staunch——

"—the deep Senatorial bow."

SIR GALLAHAD: The Senator from Texas has clarified a point I was laboring to make; a subtlety which I daresay some of our colleagues have overlooked; an overwhelming verity we dare not ignore . . . These two statesmen of heroic mold——

* * * *

SIR GAWAIN: And may I intrude long enough to add that the enchanted vistas of Marlin, Texas, and the matchless landscapes of Prescott, Arizona, which have given two such talented and famous sons to their country, alone are fit to be ranked in the golden lists of terrestrial loveliness with my own native Asheville—that incomparable Elysium, that pearl-encrusted Eden, that diamond-studded Olympus——

* * * *

And so it goes—the tourists in the balcony find themselves bowing to the doorman, the New England and Midwestern Senators bowing to the pages, the reading clerks to the shorthand repoters, the newspapermen to each other, and for a moment everyone is happy, until it is time to put on the hobnailed political galoshes and wade into another Ludlow resolution or lynching bill or something else that gets into the Congressional hair.

Baby Falls, Loses Breath; Heurichs Call Rescue Squad

The Fire Rescue squad was called to the home of Chris Heurich, jr., 3400 Massachusetts avenue northwest, last night because the youngest Heurich child, Constance, 11 months old, fell and frightened herself so badly she forgot to breathe.

By the time the squad reached the house, however, Constance was breathing normally.

First Lady Cites Citizens' Duty To District in Talk at G. W. U.

Tells Freshman Class; Second-Hand Interest in Government Hasn't Been Good;' Says Many Fail to Vote Intelligently.

Declaring that "the second-hand interest in the District government hasn't been good," Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt last night told members of the George Washington University freshman class "Washington needs the attention of every citizen."

Answering a student's question in an open forum as to whether people in the District are deprived and discouraged of activity in civic affairs, Mrs. Roosevelt said "the fact that the citizens of Washington are voteless is all the more reason why they should be more active in civic affairs."

More than 400 freshmen were on hand to hear Mrs. Roosevelt discuss "The Functions of a University in a Democracy," the third in a series of discussions by prominent personalities.

Speaking further on the District, the First Lady declared, "Institutions here should be pointed out to visitors as the best in the country, but that could not be done today. It is only natural that the District's lawmakers do not feel the interests in the city that they would in their own home town, and I think the more action shown by citizens of Washington would be so much the better."

"There is no form of government which needs education more than that of a democratic form of government," Mrs. Roosevelt said. "If a democracy is to function properly, every citizen must first understand the problems of the country."

Pointing out that too many people cast their votes because "they feel it is their right and that they must exercise their franchise," Mrs. Roosevelt declared "there is not much use in voting unless you do it intelligently."

Businessmen Back Sales Tax As 'Least Evil'

Georgetown Association Opposes Re-enactment of Business Levy.

A general sales tax—"the least of three evils"—was favored by the Georgetown Business Men's Association yesterday over income or business privilege imposts.

The association adopted a resolution opposing re-enactment of the business tax and asking its replacement by the sales levy.

In debate that preceded its adoption, members of the association assailed Congress for imposing taxes in a city whose citizens had no voice in imposition of levies or disposal of municipal funds.

"Since the Federal Government uses the most desirable land in the District as sites for Federal buildings, Congress should appropriate sufficient funds to offset the burden of police and fire protection now borne by residents of the city," a member of the association declared.

Citizen's Leader Retires.

William S. Torbert, a founder of the Rhode Island Avenue Citizens Association and its treasurer for 14 years, retired from office last night upon the election of new officers. Torbert received a unanimous vote of appreciation from the 30 members who met at the Woodrige Branch Library.

Officers elected were Freeman Weiss, president; H. J. Clay, first vice president; Mrs. E. G. Sievers, second vice president; Wallace E. Perry, secretary; H. F. Niemeyer, financial secretary; Miss Katherine Donahay, assistant secretary; J. A. Duerksen, treasurer, and T. J. Llewellyn and J. W. Hardey, delegates to the Federation of Citizens' Associations.

The association approved the proposed investigation of the District transportation situation, to be held by the sub-committee on transportation of the House District Committee. Their action followed talks by Robert Dougan, of the Capital Transit Co., and S. H. Lipkowitz, representing the recently organized Citizens' Conference on Transportation.

How 'Other Half' Lives.

How the "forgotten" half of the District lives in alley slums within short distances of monumental Government buildings was demonstrated to members of the Cathedral Heights Citizens Association last night by Helen Dewey Hoffman, director of the Washington Housing Association.

Mrs. Hoffman showed the association pictures of living conditions in alleys, and described efforts of the District Alley Authority to clear them. She said the authority "hoped" to get funds from the Federal Housing Administration.

Colored Baptists Elect.

Headquarters for colored Baptists have been established at 1813 Seventh street northwest, it was announced yesterday. Officers of the organization elected were Rev. S. Geriah Lamkins, president; Rev. Daniel E. Wiseman, secretary; H. T. Plaster, cashier of the Seat Pleasant Farmers and Mechanics Bank, treasurer.

Building and Loan Ex-Teller Is Seized In $6,000 Shortage

George L. Koplin, jr., 1301 Fifteenth street northwest, former teller at the Montgomery Building and Loan Association, 913 Fifteenth street northwest, was arrested by agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation yesterday in connection with shortages totaling $6,000, it was announced by Director J. Edgar Hoover.

Koplin, the announcement said, signed a statement admitting the irregularities, explaining the money went to cover living expenses and to purchase property valued at $1,000 at Occoquan, Va.

The loss, said J. R. Little, president of the building association, is fully covered by bond. Koplin has not been employed by the association since November. He 41 years old and has a wife and son in California.

U.S. Woman Clerk's Murderer Refused Stay From Death

Reprieve for Norman Wesley Robinson, scheduled to die February 25 for the slaying of Mrs. Florence Goodwin, his one-time employer, has been refused by President Roosevelt, it was learned yesterday.

Robinson awaits his death in the District Jail, where he has been confined since September 18, 1936, when the murder occurred.

The 27-year-old colored slayer was arrested soon after the strangled and beaten body of the 34-year-old Government worker had been found in her second-floor bedroom at 1102 Sixteenth street northwest.

Alley Project, 1st for Whites, Is Dedicated

K Street Units to Open Saturday; to House 16 Families.

Washington's first alley housing project for white families was dedicated yesterday afternoon, marking another step in efforts of the Alley Dwelling Authority to reclaim and rehabilitate almost 200 acres in various parts of the city.

Sixteen families selected from a long list of applicants will move in Saturday. They will pay rents ranging from $32.50 to $41.50.

Located on K street southwest, between Sixth and Seventh streets, the attractive 16-unit apartment is built two stories high around an open landscaped court that has a natural elevation at the rear. Apartments contain four, five or six rooms.

Visitors who inspected the project following the dedicatory speeches were invited by John Ihlder, head of the ADA, to send in reports on "any luxury that has been included, any bit of simplification that could be made."

Ihlder pointed out that work of the ADA is still in the experimental stage and that discussions of it are invited. While the K street project represents simplifications and new ideas learned from building three previous ADA projects—occupied by colored—perfection is not claimed.

Hazen Among Speakers.

Melvin Hazen, president of the District's Board of Commissioners; Dr. Anson Phelps Stokes and Harry S. Wender, president of the Southwest Citizens Association, were speakers.

"Our endeavor has been to design the simplest possible houses that will be good to live in, good in construction, attractive in appearance. We have built them by the lowest responsible bidder. Rents are at a rate which just covers all costs, including taxes, interest on the capital invested, amortization of the buildings and operating expenses," Commissioner Hazen declared.

"Taxes included in the rent are not paid to the District, but retained by the authority for the extension of its work. They are one of the District's contributions to this work. Similarly, interest on capital advanced by the Federal Government has been retained. This is the Federal Government's contribution," he said.

Civilization Based on Home.

Dr. Stokes listed the home as the basic agency among four which he considers most necessary for a good civilization. The others he listed as church, State and school.

"In many cases the home is the most fundamental. If we do not have decent homes we cannot expect full advantages from any of the other agencies. The home is closer to most individuals than is church, school, or government."

Wender called attention to Sternberg Courts, a similar project that has been constructed in the Southwest with private funds." He said that the citizens of the area are for good housing movements, "both those sponsored by the Government and those sponsored by private enterprise."

Mrs. Mary McBride, who now lives at 493 N street southwest, was the only prospective tenant of the K street project who attended the dedication. A practicing nurse with 5 children, Mrs. McBride will occupy one of the 6-room units and pay $39 rent. She pays $30 for six rooms in her present location, but considers she is getting a bargain for in the new home she will have up-to-date equipment.

In the new home she will have furnace heat, where she formerly used a stove. The furnace will not be in the basement, but is located in the "utility room," which is a glorified back porch that also contains the coal bin and laundry sinks.

Not all the K street homes have furnaces. In some circulating heaters have been used. This is a feature adapted from former projects and based on estimates that one and a half tons of coal is needed to operate the heater during a Washington winter.

Hardwood Floors in Units.

Hardwood floors have been used throughout the units, except in the utility rooms. Most bedrooms have two closets and most upstairs halls have linen closets. Each unit has a fenced-in back yard, complete with clothesline. Built-in kitchen cabinets, hot-water stoves and modern cooking stoves have been provided.

Total construction cost of the project was listed at $82,000; in addition to cost of the land, which was $30,000. The area cleared for the project formerly was occupied by alley dwellings and dilapidated street houses, bounded by K street and three public alleys.

Woman Hurt Seriously By Auto; Driver Is Held

After being struck by an automobile in front of her home, Miss Georgie Goodchild, 61, 33 Michigan avenue northeast, was in a serious condition in Sibley Hospital last night.

Post Staff Photos.

Books collected in 50 years by Frank Stebbins, 83, of 131 Indiana avenue northwest, were threatened by fire last night. A fireman is shown with a few of the volumes. Anthony Vanglio, 10, of 213 D street northwest, returns to Stebbins (upper) a watch he found in a mound of books and old papers thrown out by firemen.

They saved the books despite protest of the owner, Frank Stebbins, that he could have saved them himself. Stebbins told firemen that a spark had set fire to some papers in his study. When firemen arrived they found Stebbins attempting to put out the rapidly spreading flames with a pail of water. Firemen were called by a pedestrian who noticed the flames and pulled the alarm.

Although the firemen succeeded in keeping the flames from reaching the bulk of the book collection, Stebbins charged that valuable papers had been lost when the firemen threw furniture out into the street. Along with the papers went a $100 gold watch, which was later found and returned by Anthony Vanglio, 10, 213 D street northwest.

One obstacle confronting firemen in their effort to save the library were the books themselves. They were lined on either side of the entrance in stacks that reached to the ceiling.

They were stacked on the stairs, which the firemen had to climb to reach the fire. And in Stebbins' study the books lined the walls and overflowed against the windows.

Around his collection of books, Stebbins last night drew the outlines of a lifetime spent in study, in legal battles over the patent claims of inventors.

Stebbins could not estimate the damage caused by the fire last night. He said he will check up on his books today and also board up the window the firemen had to break to enter the house.

Crime Body Chief Is Forum Speaker

Criminal emphasis today is on intelligence rather than force in detection and apprehension of criminals, Dr. James A. Nolan, director of the Criminal Justice Association, told the Social Work Students' Forum of Catholic University last night.

"More college graduates are entering police fields," said Dr. Nolan, "and the trend toward civil service in police departments throughout the country is an important development."

He said scientific and technical factors, such as radio cars, the teletype and applications on chemistry are most important steps.

Advisers Ask All-Night Ban On Car Horns

Midnight to 7 a. m. Curfew Would Except Only Emergency Autos.

The use of automobile horns between 12:01 a. m. and 7 a. m. would be prohibited, and a fire department survey would be made to determine where parking interfered with fire apparatus, under proposals forwarded yesterday to the District Commissioners by the Traffic Advisory Council.

The council, composed of 12 citizens and six District officials, met recently to devise better traffic conditions in the District of Columbia.

Proposals Listed.

Amend Article V, Section 15 of the traffic regulations, by adding "when a driver of a vehicle desires to park at the curb when there is room enough for only one car between two other cars, he shall drive up parallel with the car ahead of the spaces and back cautiously into the parking space, and no other vehicle shall attempt to enter the space at the same time."

Prohibit the sounding of automobile horns between 12:01 a. m. and 7 a. m., except by bona fide emergency vehicles on emergency calls.

That a survey be made by the Fire Department, through company captains throughout the city, of streets and alleys where parking interfered with fire apparatus.

Three Market Plans Offered.

Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways and member of the council, proposed three plans to settle the parking situation at the K street market. The Traffic Department recently threatened to invoke the regulation which prohibits head-in parking. After a public hearing at the District Building December 23, the District Commissioners referred the probem to the Traffic Advisory Council.

Capt. Whitehurst's plans include setting back the curb along the K street side of the market and moving the shed back, which would widen the street at that point and permit the farmers to park head-in.

Under this plan, however, an inner space next to the wall of the market would have to be eliminated. Another plan calls for cutting into the wall of the market on the K street side to provide more space for stalls.

Capital's First Alley Housing Project for White Families Opens

Post Staff Photos.

1 The old made way for the new yesterday as the District's first alley housing project for white families was dedicated. The 16 apartments in the project are located on K street southwest between Sixth and Seventh streets, an area once filled by ramshackle homes. The above shows the fronts of the attractive modern units and part of the crowd which inspected them. White concrete blocks were used in construction. There is a central landscaped court.

2 This pleased woman is Mrs. Mary McBride, the first tenant who is inspecting her up-to-date and conveniently arranged kitchen. The units rent from $32.40 to $41.50 monthly. The cost of construction was $82,000 and land cost $30,000 more.

3 Even the rear of the homes is attractive. Each family has its own backyard with clothesline, etc. Speakers at the dedication were Commissioner Melvin Hazen, Dr. Anson Phelps Stokes and Harry S. Wender, president of the Southwest Citizens Association. The ceremony marked another step in the efforts of the Alley Dwelling Authority to reclaim and rehabilitate 200 slum areas in the Capital.

1 This 52-year-old woman donated an eye so that a youth, blinded in one eye by a firecracker explosion five years ago, might see again. A surgeon examines the eye, from which the cornea will be removed and transplanted.

2 This is Clifford Simons, 19, before he underwent the operation. The cornea will serve as a new "window" for his sightless eye. The donor's eye was to be removed anyway because of a cyst on the optic nerve, but the cornea was healthy and normal.

The Red Sox lead the league; but that's only a half-truth. The Red Sox lead the league in a noncompetitive achievement. They are the first club to check in with those tastefully-done little brochures setting forth the complete data on next season's squad. Eventually, each club will set down on paper its prospectus for 1938, but the Red Sox have beaten the gun.

This department's first reaction to the little pamphlet received from the Boston Club is that if the Red Sox show half as much enterprise on the field as the office force has put into its literary effort then the Red Sox will be a serious contender. An artistically done frontispiece with red lettering on a field of white, embossed by a beauteous picture of Manager Joe Cronin's smiling pan informs the reader at a glance that here is something of more or less importance.

POVICH.

And the first name on the roster which gives age, height, weight, home address, last year's affiliation and detailed 1937 records, is no less than intriguing. It reads: "Bagby, James C., jr., pitcher, age, 22, 6 feet 2 inches, weight 170, throws right-handed."

• • • •

Father Starred in 1920.

That, of course, can be no other than young Jim Bagby, whose daddy was some shucks as a pitcher with Cleveland nearly two decades ago. It is proper that young Bagby shapes up as a string-bean pitcher, because that is exactly the kind of a pitcher his sire used to be when he was winning 30 games for the Cleveland Indians in 1920 and literally pitching 'em to their first and only pennant in big-league history.

And in young Bagby, the Red Sox have reason to believe that they have something. Because, with Hazleton, in the New York-Penn League last year, the lad won himself 21 games against only eight defeats and emerged with an earned-run average of 2.71 which, if carried into the big leagues, would stamp him as no less than a sensation.

The Red Sox roster for 1938 adds further evidence to the fact that few of the major league ball players are spawned in the city streets. From the provinces and the hinterlands come the bulk of the big league stars as is attested by such home addresses as Lonaconning, Md. (Lefty Grove); Eminence, Ky. (Johnny Marcum); Quinebaug, Conn. (Gene DeSautels); Manahawkin, N. J. (Roger Cramer); Iberia, Mo. (Byron Humphries); Squantum, Mass. (Ted Olson).

• • • •

Has Promising Rookies.

Tom Yawkey, who has invested close to $3,000,000 in the Red Sox during the last five years and gotten comparatively few runs for his money, has made few expensive purchases for Manager Joe Cronin this year. The team that finished fifth last season will go South with substantially the same squad, except for the presence of a half-dozen inexpensive but promising rookies.

These are young Bagby, who is attempting to make the big leap from Class A baseball to the big leagues; Dick Midkiff, a right-hander who won 13 and lost 8 for Little Rock; Outfielder F. Lindsay Deal, a fancy-named youth who hit .340 for Little Rock; Lee Rogers, another Little Rock graduate who won 13 and lost 8; Catcher George Dickey, little brother of Bill Dickey, who spent last season at the Sox's Little Rock farm, and Joe Gonzales, Los Angeles pitcher who had a brief tryout with Boston last season.

If there is one glaring weakness in the squad that Joe Cronin is taking South it is in his catching department. De Sautels, the No. 1 catcher when Moe Berg isn't the No. 1 catcher, never has startled anybody with his skill, and Berg, at this writing, is 35 years old.

It is a tribute to Berg's catching talents and throwing arm that he is still with the Red Sox. Berg has never been a heavy sticker and since breaking his leg while with the Indians ten years ago he has been no antelope on the bases. The ball players may search for a word when they wish to describe the fleetness of a certain fellow but they are never lost for a word when they want to describe a slow-running ball player. They say simply, "He's slower than Moe Berg."

• • • •

Cronin to Be Shortstop.

Last February the Red Sox went South with a shortstop problem on their hands. Joe Cronin had seemingly wiped his hands of the job with the announcement that he would play third base, if at all, but this year he is reinstalled as the team's shortstop. Cronin, playing all but six of the Red Sox games in 1937, staged a sensational comeback, batting .307 and outhitting all other Boston infielders, Jimmy Foxx included.

It was Foxx's slump at bat as much as anything else that caused the Red Sox to bog down. The prize slugger never did untrack himself and suffered the worst year of his big-league career, hitting only .285. In fact, only three players on the 1937 Red Sox hit better than .300—Cronin with his .307, Roger Cramer with .305 and Pinky Higgins with .302.

It was to bolster the feeble attack of the Red Sox that Yawkey during the winter traded Buck Newsom, Red Kress and Buster Mills to the Browns for Joe Vosmik, who slugged at a .325 rate last season. Ben Chapman failed to produce the right-handed hitting strength that the Sox had sought when they traded the Ferrell brothers to Washington last June, but with Vosmik aiming at the short leftfield fence, there is evidence that the Sox will be a stronger attacking club.

Pixlee Is Out As Coach of G.W. Teams

James E. Pixlee, director of athletics and head coach of football at George Washington University, will not return next year, it was learned last night.

Bill Reinhart, his right hand man, will assume the head coaching berth next season, and will add an assistant to the grid staff to assist in handling the backfield. Max Farrington, graduate manager of athletics and Pixlee's business assistant, will have full charge of arranging schedules and all other business incidental to the athletic office.

PIXLEE.

Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of the university, could not be reached for a statement, and other officials were noncommittal. A formal statement on the situation is expected to be made today by Marvin.

While Pixlee is entitled to a year's leave of absence, under a ruling which permits members of the faculty that privilege after seven consecutive years service, it was learned from an authoritative source that he will sever all connections with the university. Poor health is expected to be the reason advanced for his resignation in the formal statement, and it is true that the mild-mannered Missourian has been ailing for several years. But the major factor in the case is the indifferent success of his football teams.

The Colonials lost every major game during the past season after enjoying unprecedented success in the 1936 campaign. Victories over Arkansas and West Virginia and a scoreless tie with Mississippi featured the '36 season. Last season, however, the team failed to hit a winning stride for various reasons, and the murmuring against Pixlee grew in volume.

Dr. Marvin, a close personal frend and staunch supporter, as well as Pixlee's superior at the university, is believed to have influenced the coach in his decision. Marvin brought Pixlee to Washington in the autumn of 1930 and vested in him his present powers. During Pixlee's tenure Marvin has been his most ardent supporter and the man responsible for his continued service in the face of adverse criticism and conditions. Pixlee, tormented by ill-health, frequently expressed a desire to relinquish his duties, but remained on at Marvin's urgent bequest.

Marvin Upbraided Team.

Aware of the student body's growing discontent with the football situation, Marvin accompanied the team to Morgantown, W. Va., for the game with West Virginia. He shattered precedent by addressing the squad between halves, upbraiding the men for their lackadaisical attitude. Soon after, rumors that Pixlee would resign at the end of the 1938 school term grew in volume and intensity.

Reinhart, a graduate of Oregon University, where he coached a decade, joined the downtown school's athletic staff two years ago, succeeding Len Walsh and taking over the backfield duties. Last year he stepped into the role of head basketball coach, vacated by Roland Logan, and met with immediate success. He has borne the brunt of the football burden, and, while Pixlee always remained in charge, Reinhart's authority increased with each passing game.

Farrington is one of Pixlee's proteges and only recently attended the annual meeting of football coaches at New Orleans, where he entered into preliminary negotiations for games in 1939, '40 and '41.

Pixlee could not be reached for a statement last night. At his home it was said he had left for a trip to Philadelphia and New York and would not return until Sunday.

Armstrong's Kayo Punch Fells Venturi

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 12.—Henry Armstrong, world's featherweight champion, raided the ranks of the lightweights again tonight and knocked out Enrico Venturi, one of the best of the 135-pound contenders, in the sixth round of their scheduled 10-round bout before 12,000 fans in Madison Square Garden. Armstrong weighed 134½; Venturi, 137¾.

Venturi, writhing in apparent agony, fell to the canvass after a vicious left to the lower body which many of the ringsiders thought was below the belt. Under the "no foul" rule of the New York State Athletic Commission there was nothing for Referee Arthur Donovan to do but begin a count. Venturi, his face distorted with pain, remained on his back while the count went on.

Purse Held Up.

An extraordinary feature of the knockout was that Venturi leaped nimbly to his feet immediately after the timekeeper tolled "ten," but later collapsed in his corner. It was several minutes before his handlers could get him out of the ring.

The fact that the Italian regained his feet so promptly after the knockout count was finished brought an announcement from Brig. Gen. John J. Phelan, chairman of the commission, that Venturi's purse would be held up pending an investigation.

Dr. William A. Walker, commission physician, who examined Venturi afterwards, said that he could find no evidence that the fighter had been fouled.

Armstrong was leading three rounds to two on the Associated Press score card when the finish came after 2 minutes and 49 seconds of the sixth heat had elapsed. One of the two rounds awarded Venturi was the result of a penalty for an illegal blow Armstrong landed in the fifth.

Phil Furr Wins.

Phil Furr, 149, Washington, outpointed Mike Frattini, 147¼, Italy (6); Armando Sicilia, 125¼, Springfield, Ill., outpointed Cristobal Jaramillo, 126, Puerto Rico (6); Wesley Ramey, 135½, Grand Rapids, Mich., outpointed Wesley Farrell, 138, New Orleans (6); Johnny Rinaldi, 138¾, New York (drew) Nunzio Besagno, 135, Newark, N. J. (6); Sammy Julian, 136, Brooklyn, knocked out Dominick Colin, 136, New York (2).

2,500 Watch Hoyas Erase Early Lead

By Lewis F. Atchison.

A highly favored Georgetown basketball team ran true to form last night at Tech High School in running roughshod over Maryland to score a decisive 57-39 victory. A crowd of 2,500 fans braved inclement weather to see the Hoyas score their second straight court triumph over their suburban rivals.

But the team that trampled Temple in a stunning upset Monday night didn't win without an argument. The Terps, although visibly outclassed, gave the highly-polished Hilltop quintet a battle every inch of the way although it was a futile fight. Maryland was at a terrific disadvantage under the backboard where "Big Mike" Petroskey and Joe Murphy, to mention a few, were plucking off errant shots like apple pickers.

Petroskey, incidentally, led his mates to victory with a half dozen field goals, followed closely by Tom Nolan with five, and Joe Murphy, who contributed four more and a couple of fouls. The big guns on Maryland's side were Waverly Wheeler, who made half his shots in midair, and Charley Norton, each of whom fired five field goals through the hoop. George Knepley, who played a fine floor game, was next in line, followed by "Sport" McCarthy.

It was McCarthy who kept the Terps in the running throughout the early part of the first half, and who, in fact, kept them in the lead for a time. He broke the ice with a field goal, and then kept plunking 'em in with alarming regularity to help Maryland attain a sizable 10-4 advantage.

But at this juncture Georgetown, which experienced difficulty in piercing Maryland's man-for-man defense and in finding the basket, began to hit its stride, and with Bassin, Petroskey and Nolan setting the pace, overtook the Terps at 12-11. It was a seesaw battle of baskets from that point on with Bassin's southpaw shot finally sending Georgetown ahead at 16-15. That centrated drive, for Maryland didn't seemed to be the signal for a conget near the basket again until the Hoyas had rammed six field goals and a foul through the net and gained a comfortable 29-15 lead.

Milt Mullitz and Waverly Wheeler inaugurated a promising Maryland rally at the outset of the second half with a total of three field goals, two by Wheeler, but the attack bogged down in the face of closer Georgetown guarding. Maryland, meanwhile, reverted to its time-honored zone defense and Georgetown took full advantage of the opportunity to add to its lead. It was 44-29 when the Hoyas evidenced their first sign of exhaustion, and from then on it was a ragged exhibition. Neither team was at its best.

Maryland waged a futile fight through the closing minutes to overhaul the foe, but Georgetown power and reserves prevailed. The last three baskets of the game were marked up for the Hoyas, who ran in their second-stringers in the last few minutes.

In a preliminary game St. John's suffered its first defeat of the season, bowing to Georgetown's Freshmen, 40-25. The yearlings led all the way.

Bob Pastor May Fight Everett Here Jan. 31

Negotiations for Appearance of Nation's Seventh Ranking Heavyweight at Turner's Arena Now Are Under Way.

Bob Pastor, the Nation's seventh ranking heavyweight, will fight here, January 31, against Buck Everett, local championship claimant, if plans begun yesterday by Promoter Joe Turner are successful.

Turner's matchmaker, Goldie Ahearn, signed Everett to a contract early yesterday that would require him to meet any selected heavyweight in a 10-round feature bout on January 31.

Then Ahearn talked to Jimmy Johnson, Pastor's manager, over long-distance wires to New York, concerning the appearance of the man who stayed 10 rounds with Champion Joe Louis.

Johnson informed Ahearn that he was willing to close for the deal, but would have to withhold confirmation until late today or tomorrow. It would mark the first time a member of the first ten heavyweights has ever appeared in a local fight.

Everett, who flattened Murray Kanner, young local heavyweight Monday, in two rounds, is hitting the comeback trail after a six-month reconditioning period in the North Carolina mountains. He holds victories over Bob Tow, Marty Gallagher and Natie Brown.

Pastor lost a 10-round decision to Nathan Mann, No. 4 ranked heavyweight contender, in his last bout.

Blair Quintet Wins, 33-16

With Dick Sills and Jimmy Donnelly scoring 9 field goals between them, Montgomery Blair High School courtmen trounced the National Training School five, 33 to 16, yesterday on the Silver Spring court.

The hosts took a 10-to-2 lead at the first quarter, increased it to 16-5 at half time, and let the second and third teams protect the advantage during the latter periods.

Donnelly scored 10 points with Sills making 8. Johnson led the Training School dribblers with 5 points.

Kenwood's Golf Shop Is Robbed

A gross of golf balls, three rain jackets and Assistant Professional Al Jamison's shoes were taken from the Kenwood Golf Shop early yesterday morning, the looters gaining admittance by boring a hole in a side door and releasing a latch.

Jamison found the brace and bit in the yard as he opened the shop yesterday morning. No clubs were touched, the robbers confining their looting to the showcase.

Montgomery County police found fingerprints on the half door, used to pass candy to caddies. It was the second time within a year the heavily barred shop has been broken into, the last time the culprits confining their work to petty cash.

Moon Evans Lost To Takoma Pros

The Takoma Fire Department professional basketball team suffered the loss of one of its most dependable players yesterday when Moon Evans, former Maryland University star forward, fractured his wrist in practice. He is expected to be lost for several weeks.

At the same time it was announced that Takoma will acquire two new players, probably prior to Sunday night's game against the Rhiengold Brewers, of Frederick, Md.

Terp Rasslers Lose to Hopkins

Baltimore, Md., Jan. 12.—Johns Hopkins University wrestling team defeated the Maryland University grapplers, 21 to 13, tonight in a meet held at the local's gymnasium. The hosts took the verdict in five of the eight bouts staged. A feature of the meet was Bob Vernon's performance in the 126-pound class, in which he defeated Rockstrok, of Maryland, in 1 minute and 35 seconds with a double arm lock. Thus far Vernon has been undefeated in dual college wrestling meets.

Navy Tossers Defeat Virginia U., 36 to 14

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 12.—A fast breaking Navy team, which exhibited a fine approach game and an improvement in its shooting over that against Duke in the opening basketball game, defeated the University of Virginia here this afternoon, 36 to 14.

Three complete Navy line-ups faced the Cavaliers and each came out with some margin. However, the first string, playing only during the opening period, ran ahead to the tune of 26 to 8 and allowed the second and third strings to go easy during the rest of the game.

A second string, headed by Jack Geis at forward and George Ghesquierre, who had been shifted from guard to center, scored eight points to Virginia's six during all but two minutes of the second half. A third string, playing the final two minutes, led the visitors by 8 to 0, by virtue of Garanson's double netting from the line, the only scoring during that portion of the game.

Though rather slow in getting his start, Bob Gillette, Navy's diminutive forward, led in the scoring by virtue of the fact that he dropped one goal from the line in addition to his three field goals. Captain Alan McFarland and Jack Geis also scored trios from the floor.

Two minutes after the start, Laney, Navy guard, earned a point from the line, and a minute later, Strickler, of Virginia, scored on a side shot, putting that team ahead for the only time during the contest.

McFarland scored on a pass from Gillette to put the Navy ahead again and then two floor goals by towering Frank Lynch, center, gave the Navy the comfortable lead of 7 to 2. The next score was on a line goal by Campbell, of Virginia, but by half time in the first period, the Navy was leading by 15 to 3, with Gillette joining the scoring forces of McFarland and Lynch.

Virginia was changing its team repeatedly but did not seem to strike the right combination or find a forward who could get the ball through the hoop. Its passing game was undeveloped and the ball was frequently lost when the visitors were compelled to pass it around at mid court.

The feature of the Navy's game was its excellent approach and fast breaking, while the shooting showed much improvement over that against Duke.

It was the Navy's second victory in two starts, and the first defeat for the Virginians, who had won two earlier games.

On Saturday, the Navy team meets Pennsylvania, at Philadelphia, its only game on the road except that against the Army, at West Point, with which the schedule will close.

Wilson Bows To Episcopal

Washington Five Beaten by 27-14 Score.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Alexandria, Va., Jan. 12.—Episcopal High School's cage artists chalked up their second win in as many starts here this afternoon, overwhelming Woodrow Wilson High of Washington by a 27-14 margin, in their new winter sports garden.

The Maroons led from the outset, and the Presidents at no time offered them any serious opposition. They were held to five points in the first half, while in the final two periods they did most of their scoring against Episcopal's second five.

During the time that Episcopal's first team stayed in the game, the visitors were able to cage but one field goal. They did not score their first double decker until early in the second quarter, when the Maroons second-stringers entered the game.

Clark Griffith, president of the Washington Nationals, batted out the announcement yesterday that he's going to let the Government decide the home-run merits of big league baseballs.

"I've worked out an arrangement with the Bureau of Standards," he said, "to test the so-called National League dead ball and the so-called American League rabbit ball."

Griffith—a considerable pitcher in his playing days—hastened to add that this doesn't mean he's going to throw up strikes for Uncle Sam's scientists to swing at.

"This experiment," he said, "will be a mechanical one. Machines will do all the slugging and nobody will do any pitching."

A human test was held in Baltimore Monday and a trio of sluggers from the American, National and International leagues knocked both balls over the fence with deadly regularity.

"Those guys," said Griffith, referring to Sluggers Jimmy Foxx, Chuck Klein and Charlie Keller, "can sock any ball just about any place under certain conditions."

The Nationals' president didn't say so, but there is deep suspicion his "certain conditions" included a pitcher named Johnnie Wittig, the chucker in the experiment.

Wittig pitches for the Baltimore Orioles, and league records show: Games appeared in 4; games lost, 1; games won, 0.

The trio of home run hitters whacked 18 of Pitcher Wittig's pitches over the fence. But that didn't bother him. He said he was enthusiastic over the new National League "dead ball."

The Federal fence-buster, which is expected to be ready for slugging in three weeks, will work on the principle of the mechanical golf ball hitter.

It is also possible that Dr. Dryden will be called upon to decide whether, when hit, the National League ball "whooshes," and the American "whacks."

There's no better whisky than well-aged mellow Scotch... and no better Scotch than Johnnie Walker. That's why so many men everywhere are making theirs Johnnie Walker after office. After dinner, of course, Johnnie Walker goes without saying.

It's sensible to stick with

15 in Crowd Cash $635 Daily Double

Longshots Dominate on Program as 15,000 Visit Track.

By the Associated Press.

Hialeah Park, Fla., Jan. 12.—Three of the most lightly regarded starters in the 16-horse field accounted for the pay-off positions in the tenth Hialeah Park Inaugural Handicap as the Miami Jockey Club's 40-day meeting began here today. Clocks, in the silks of Oklahoma's L. E. Ogle, made his own pace and won the $5,210 winner's share of the purse by a length. The 5-year-old Brookmeade Stable castoff paid $61 for $2, and ran the 9 furlongs in 1:10 2-5, not threatening the track record.

Mrs. G. H. Emick's Rollin Home, winner of two races at Tropical Park while running for $1,500 and $2,500, respectively, was an easy second, four lengths clear of Maemere Farm's Go Home, another outsider.

The 15,000 or more fans that came for the opening of what is expected to prove the most successful meeting ever held here, received a stunning surprise when Felix Spatola's Wise Prince and H. P. Headley's Preeminent, the first and second choices, failed to race according to their class and past performances. Wise Prince, a sensational winner at Tropical and coupled with Caballero II, finished tenth, while Preeminent, coupled with Fraidy Cat, was fifth.

In justice to Wise Prince, it must be noted that he had scant chance with the bad start. Several others also were deprived of an equal break in the straggling getaway. Go Home, which broke from outside the stalls, beat the gate, while Clocks and Rollin Home were among those to receive a fair start. Infantry, which finished fourth, closed a big gap.

The initial race, a 3-furlong dash down the straightaway, brought out the first batch of "baby" racers of the Florida season. Fourteen fillies began their careers, with opening honors going to Elwood Sachsenmaier's Charlotte Girl by two lengths. Sammy Renick was astride the $17.50 for $2 shot and brought his mount from close behind the early pace of the favored Sweet Patrice, which was saddled by Hirsch Jacobs, and won with little effort. Inscoelda, a "field" horse, was beaten three lengths for the place. The time was 34 3-5 seconds.

CHARLOTTE GIRL, away forwardly, went in nearest pursuit of the pace from the start, responded with determination through the stretch under a vigorous hand ride and wore SWEET PATRICE down to win going away. SWEET PATRICE, quickest to begin, drew out in the opening furlong, raced straight along the inner rail, but was unable to withstand the winner's rush. INSCOELDA broke well, raced far out from the inner rail, shook off HUSKIE QUEEN and finished well.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. The Sunny Isles. For 3-year-olds. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:30. Off 2:34. Winner, William Wick's ch. g. GAYSET, breaking from his inner post position, assumed command in the opening quarter under strong pressure, withstood repeated challenges from DARBY DUKE and CAL RAINEY rounding the turn, continued gamely when placed to a drive and outlasted MYTHICAL KING. The latter, steadied on the pace until straightening into the stretch, finished gamely and was wearing the winner down. SKETCHBOOK, prominent contender all the way, made a bold effort through the stretch and wore CAL RAINEY down in the final strides.

GREAT HASTE, quickest to find his stride, set a fast pace in the opening three furlongs, went into a big lead and held sway thereafter. MIRWELL, going in nearest pursuit of the leader and saving ground the entire trip, finished gamely, but could not improve his position. ALEXANDRINE, strongly urged from the start, maintained her position gamely and held the others safe.

STOCKS, away slowly, followed the pace under restraint until rounding the turn, moved up swiftly on the outside when placed under pressure, drew clear at the furlong pole, but then faltered and just lasted to stave off UP AND UP'S Challenge. UP AND UP, on the inside, worked his way forwardly gradually, came around the leader through the stretch, closed courageously and would have won in a few more strides. LIGHT lacked early speed.

CLOCKS, away forwardly, displayed keen speed, drew clear in the opening quarter, gradually increased his lead rounding the turn, but then began to falter through the stretch and was vigorously ridden to maintain his lead. ROLLIN HOME broke well, went forwardly all the way, closed gamely under punishment and was gaining on the winner at the end. GO HOME outbroke field, went prominently for the entire trip, but was tiring at the end. INFANTRY, away slowly, improved position rapidly in the last quarter, was full of run at the finish. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MIDAS, $106.00, $37.60, $16.80; WHITE GINGER, $9.40, $5.40; LIVE ONE, $3.50.

MIDAS secured a good position rounding the first turn, followed the pace under slight restraint until straightened into the stretch, closed with determination on the outside and won going away. WHITE GINGER improved his position steadily on the outside in the final half mile, took a brief lead through the stretch, but then bore out, saved ground thereafter, but faltered in the final drive.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MISS CAPERS, $15.40, $6.10, $3.40; BOMAR, $7.70, $4.60; ONE CHANCE, $2.50.

MISS CAPERS, going prominently on the outside all the way, responded gamely when put to a drive and wore BOMAR down in the closing strides. BOMAR broke forwardly and cleanly, took command rounding the first turn, saved ground thereafter, and continued in game fashion when challenged, but could not stave off the winner. ONE CHANCE outbroke the field, bore out rounding the first turn and was outrun.

Selections at Hialeah Park.

Dear Al:

That was a nice parlay, if you had it. I mean that Stocks and Clocks. And how about that Midas? That was gold for you at that $106 mutuel, if you had a piece of it. I believe the flamingos must have gotten in the eyes of most of my selections. But it's going to be a long meeting and where there's $2 there's plenty of hope. A check up on the Tropical meeting is amazing. Despite the big prices the favorites took down about one-third of the races. In the 160 events, the choice stepped down to the wire ahead in 54. Taking into consideration that few of the winning favorites were odds-on, it looks as if the boys who bet the heavier dough made good. Wayne Wright made his appearance here today and promptly hustled into riding clothes. Wright has done his best riding in the winter and may cut a big figure in the racing for jockey honors at this meeting. For the first time this year, the new crop of juveniles were on display. They were a frisky, rollicking gang and raced greenly as usual. However, they will learn and perhaps one of them will win a derby or something.

Bill.

First race—Your guess is as good as mine in this field. If you want mine, I'll take Romaunt, Our Mat and Selmalad. The first named has worked well, according to Clocker Mike.

Second race—Miss Oak appears to have found the spot for throwing her hoofs productively. She is as sharp as hands can make a filly. Kelt and Akehurst to take care of the others.

Third race—Ladfield is a veteran with much speed and appears well placed in this field. Needs only to run his real race. Wrennee and Dankeschon appear to have something on the remainder of the field.

Fourth race—Kinross has shown good time in trials and may take down the major portion of this purse. Four Spot shapes up as a keen contender. Miss Marlboro could take it all with improvement.

Fifth race—Aces Wild went well at the other track and seems capable of scoring in company of this caliber. Airegla was a bear in Maryland and is dangerous. Evening Shadow to take care of the others.

Eighth race—Brandon Prince may turn loose with a winning performance in this group. Mare Pep and Continuity won at Tropical and are due some respect.

Best bet—Brandon Prince.

By Jack Cuddy.

Copyright, 1938, by the United Press.

New York, Jan. 12.—He tried to muscle in on the spellin' bee.

Fine snow was powdering down from the sky, like a white benediction, upon a disrupted world outside the Twentieth Century Club—settling upon the timbers and boards where workmen are building that subway beneath Sixth avenue.

* * * *

As the snow fell all was calm within the Twentieth Century office, where some newspapermen quietly discussed the big social event of the season—the spellin' bee. It seems that the National Broadcasting Co. is staging a big spelling tilt between boxers and wrestlers over a nation-wide hook-up Saturday night. The bee will be held at Madame Bey's camp, Summit, N. J. That's where Tommy Farr is training for his brawl with Jim Braddock on January 21.

* * * *

Because of the opponents and intelligences involved in this particular bee, the boxing writers were unable to agree on whether it would be a spelling or a misspelling match. They were trying to settle this point amicably when Hymie Caplin blew in from his delicatessen and bar next door.

* * * *

Hymie minced no words. Hymie said, "the nit-wits wot is runnin' this spellin' show ought to have their heads examined. I see by the papers that Mushky Jackson was signed as coach for the boxin' spellers. I oughta have that job, 'cause I can misspell Mushky into the gobboons any day in the week."

* * * *

The reporters swarmed about Hymie and said that was too bad, indeed. They said, "Hymie, if you can prove that you can spell worse than Mushky—or that you can spell better than him—maybe we can do something about it." Hymie said, "I'll prove that I can spell better than Mushky or anybody in the room. No—I can't do it now. Come over to my place at 4 o'clock this afternoon, and I'll do it. I gotta go up to the gymnasium now."

* * * *

Hymie had to go to the gymnasium because he manages a string of 12 fighters in addition to running his delicatessen and bar next door to the Hippodrome.

* * * *

Promptly at 4 p. m. the bevy of boxing writers trooped into Caplin's place. And there was Hymie behind the bar—as nonchalant as you please. Hymie says, "All right, I'm ready. Just give me the words, and I'll spell 'em. I got a memory like a elephant. Don't forget I went a year and a half to high school."

* * * *

The reporters had some very good words all ready for Mr. Caplin. They had rifled a dictionary getting them while Hymie was at the Gym.

* * * *

One of the reporters said, "We'll start you off easy. Spell manoover". Hymie, a middle-sized blond of 37, scratched his taffy-colored locks, looked at the ceiling and then down at the bar. He "You can spell it two ways—m-a-n-e-u-v-e-r, or, m-a-n-o-e-u-v-r-e."

Bramham Optimistic.

Hot Springs, Ark., Jan. 12 (AP).—Minor league baseball apparently is set for another successful season, W. G. Bramham, of Durham, N. C., national president of minor leagues, indicated here today.

O'Donnell's Goal Beats Chevy Chase

By Jack Munhall.

Gonzaga's basketball team weathered a last-period comeback by Bethesda-Chevy Chase yesterday to earn a 24-22 victory. It was Gonzaga's fourth triumph in six games and Bethesda's fourth loss in six starts.

A capacity crowd in Gonzaga gym stood on its feet throughout the final five minutes of play to watch the Marylanders fight back to overcome a nine-point deficit only to lose when Lane O'Donnell, Gonzaga center, broke loose to count on a snowbird with less than two minutes to play.

Training all the way, Bethesda found the range in the fourth quarter to register four consecutive baskets and a free throw to suddenly transform Gonzaga's apparently safe 22-13 lead into a tie game. Bill Fuller, a substitute guard, sparked the rally, flipping in a pair of difficult one-handers from the sidecourt. However, after his second shot, which deadlocked the score and sent Bethesdans' hopes soaring, O'Donnell grabbed the ball in the midst of a frenzied scramble, feinted his guard and rushed in for an easy snowbird to clinch the game.

Gonzaga's team turned in a smart performance in whipping the team that easily defeated Eastern High School in a recent upset. Chip Collins, whose set shot accurancy was a feature of the struggle, staked Gonzaga to a 2-0 lead immediately following the opening scrimmage and from then on his team trailed but once.

The well-matched fives fought point for point in the first quarter but Gonzaga was in the van except when Carroll Hayden sank a lengthy heave to give Bethesda a 9-8 advantage.

Central Rally Tops G. U. Prep, 25-21.

Central essayed a new role yesterday in nosing out Georgetown Prep., 25-21, in a thrilling basketball game played at Garrett Park. The local team which has dropped several contests by narrow margins, after holding big leads, came from behind to defeat the prep team with a fast finish.

The Little Hoyas, ahead most of the way, held a 21-20 lead with slightly more than a minute to play but Central rapidly dropped in two baskets and a free throw for its victory margin. Harry Silverman made what proved to be the winning basket on a one-handed flip from the foul stripe and afterwards Harry Martin and Len Ornstein boosted the advantage.

With John Fanning and Leonard Sokol, Central's leading scorers, shackled by the close-guarding Prepmen, Martin and Ornstein came through to shoulder the offensive burden. Each scored 9 points.

Handball Matches To Jack Schwartz

Jack Schwartz appears certain to come through undefeated in the Y. M. C. A. round robin handball tournament, after again dominating play in last night's semifinal round by winning in both doubles and singles.

Trouncing Wondrack in straight games, 21-12, 21-6, the District ace then teamed with Pearlman to upset Woodward-Vineberg, 21-13, 16-21, 21-12, to further increase his string of victories.

Payne outlasted Goldstein to register a 21-9, 12-21, 21-20 win, while Wendlandt-Moore defeated Wondrack-W. Englehardt in a hard-fought match, 21-11, 15-21, 21-13.

Recreation League Led by Univ. Shop

The Marvins Credit Co. bowling team, paced by Lou Pantos' 398 and Joe Freschi's 392, knocked the Marlboro Hotel team out of a first place tie with the University Shop, when they swept their set from the Hotelmen last night in the strong Recreation League at Recreation Alleys. The defeat sent Marlboro down to third place.

The University Shop took undisputed possession of first place by taking a 2-1 decision from the last place Cooke Press despite Joe Weakley's 397.

Terry's Home Appliance Co., led by Cliff Hollis' 374 and Fred Murphy's 367, moved into second place by taking the odd game from Allied Roofing Co. Perce Wolfe's 364 was high for the losers.

Herzog's, aided by Joe Di Misa's 418 and Astor Clarke's 373, took a 2-1 decision from Blankens Restaurant. Bregman's Wildcats, led by Abe Beaver's 378 and Chaney's 373, took the odd game from Blaydes Contracting Co. despite Paul Perkins' 396 and Andy Price's 367.

Nagurski's Title on Line In Mat Bout

Nagurski, who is recognized as champion of the wrestling universe, risks his crown against the 7-foot 4-inch giant with the tremendous beard in a finish bout.

Either Cyclone (Fat Man) Burns or Benny (Watermelon) Bortnick will handle the match, if it's weight they need. Burns may get the call.

Hundreds of Minnesotans, members of the State society and the alumni association, have made reservations for tonight's title bout.

It will be the former Minnesota all-American's second title defense here in six months. Late last summer he threw Joe Cox in some 40 minutes.

Nagurski will feature a flying tackle and elbow smash in his bout with the giant Sullivan. He weighs 230 pounds and stands 6 feet 3. Sullivan weighs 270, but has a 94-inch reach—which won't help Nagurski any.

Outstanding among the supporting bouts is the one between Dr. John (Dropkick) Murphy, the blonde Boston physician, considered quite a sensation, and Paddy Mack, the Irish boy. They mix in a 30-minute special bout.

First bout is at 8:30.

Bank Leaguers To Play Tonight

The Bankers Basketball League will stage three games tonight in the Heurich gymnasium, the first starting at 7:30 between American Security and Trust and Lincoln National. At 8:30, National Savings & Trust plays Liberty National that should prove a battle royal as the teams are about evenly matched. National Savings is leading the league without the loss of a game while Liberty is tied with Riggs National for second place each having lost but one game. In the third game of the evening at 9:30, Riggs plays Union Trust.

Gulli-Simmons Duel Awaited

Another Lorraine Gulli-Ida Simmons duel is expected to furnish the high spot of the seventh annual Times Dixie Sweepstakes here on Saturday, although the best women bowlers from Baltimore, Richmond, Springfield and Bridgeport may have a say as to the disposition of the first-prize money.

Miss Simmons, the Nation's top feminine duckpin bowler, will be after her fourth win of the season, while Miss Gulli, who is the second-ranking bowler, has ample local backing as a result of several fine performances in previous matches.

The entry list may exceed 60 players, as Richmond is sending 15 representatives and Baltimore's delegation may be as large. The suburban alleys may swell the list, as Earle Stocking has promised at least four entries from his Silver Spring plant.

The first block of the sweeps will be rolled at the Rosslyn alleys Saturday noon, with the second block scheduled at Convention Hall at 4 p. m. and the third and windup set at Lucky Strike at 7:30 p. m. Entry fee, including games, is $6.50, with George L. Isemann, executive chairman, accepting the entries.

A majority of the field competing in the Middle Atlantic event is expected to stop over at Lucky Strike alleys on Sunday afternoon for the Catherine Quigley Sweepstakes. Six games will be rolled, starting at 2 p. m.

Roosevelt Jayvees Beat Hamilton

The Roosevelt Jayvees basketball team continued its winning stride yesterday defeating Hamilton Playground, 26-20, in a game played in Roosevelt gym.

The Rough Riders led all the way due in the main to the fine performances of Pete Lambros, who scored six points, and George Smith and John Moore, who tallied four each.

Hymie Perlo, who enters Roosevelt next year, and Bill Harris paced the losers' attack with eight markers each.

'Rassler Nagurski a Great Gridder!' Says Dutch Bergman

By Walter Haight.

"Dimple in the chin; devil within."

It doesn't seem to add up that I should start this story about a modern Goliath with one of mother's proverbs, but, somehow, I kept repeating it to myself yesterday as I stood with Dutch Bergman, Catholic University's director of athletics, in front of a picture of a charging football player. When Bergman pointed to the picture and bellowed, "There he is!" well, I sidestepped and put my hands over my stomach.

HAIGHT.

Yes, there's a dimple in Bronko Nagurski's chin and he has played the devil with the opposition within the confines of a football field or a wrestling mat. As I stood and gazed at this all man, I had a sort of "between the devil and the deep blue sea" feeling.

With Nagurski scheduled to meet John Sullivan tonight at Turner's Arena and with Haight's eating depending on a few thousand words each day, I chugged out Brookland way to determine just how well Bergman remembered the Midwest giant he helped coach at the University of Minnesota.

"Greatest of All."

"Haight, you are looking at the greatest football player of all time," said Bergman, after I had maneuvered around to get his desk between me and the photograph. "Bronko belongs on anybody's all-time, All-American football team. In the three years he played at Minnesota, Bronko was a guard, tackle, end and fullback and he was All-American at every position. A fellow who loved football, so much in fact, that I believe he would have paid the Chicago Bears to let him play after I introduced him to George Halas, owner of the club."

How did Nagurski start wrestling?

It was through Tony Stecher, brother of the famous Joe, that Bronko first took up the mat game. Stecher dreamed of Nagurski as a wrestling champion as he watched the big fellow plow through the line and mow down interference for the Bears. Nagurski had the strength, the size and the speed. He told Bronko so, but the football star laughed him off. If Nagurski wanted to raise cauliflowers he'd buy a farm.

Plays Right Card.

One day, Stecher played the right card. "Well, Bronko, wrestling is tougher than football—takes more guts. I don't blame you for refusing to try it," said Stecher.

That afternoon Stecher and Nagurski, stripped for action, met in the gym. Stecher, many years older than Bronko and much smaller, tossed the grid star around like he was handling a baby. Finally, Bronko reached out, swung his arms around Tony and began to squeeze. So tight was he held that when he was released he could barely whisper, "Get me to a hospital." Two broken ribs was the verdict.

Tony told Bronko that he could forget the ribs if he would take up wrestling. Bronko agreed. Joe Stecher and Henry Ordemann were obtained as instructors and in Nagurski's words, "Even a bigger dummy than myself could learn to wrestle with that sort of instruction."

Wanted to Fight.

Nagurski was born in Canada, but his family moved 70 miles down the river to International Falls, Minn., when he was three years old. He was raised there among the rugged log-rollers, timber-choppers, lumberjacks and the like. Bronko was not very old when he began roughing it with these fellows. He hoped to be a fighter, but soon turned his thoughts to football and the gridiron was foremost in his mind when he entered college.

Bronko's mother was opposed to his playing rough sports and for this reason she saw him play only one football game and compete in one wrestling match.

Some of the high points of Nagurski's college football career were:

The Minnesota - Notre Dame game of 1927—his first year in football. Notre Dame was sweeping the Nation. The Ramblers were leading 7 to 0, and had the ball deep in Minnesota territory. Bronko tackled Ed Wynne, Notre Dame back, so hard that he dropped the ball. The Gophers recovered and went on to a touchdown and a tie score.

Wisconsin was a heavy favorite over Minnesota in 1928, but Bronko's team had a 6-to-0 lead. Just before the final whistle, Bo Cuisiner got in the clear and headed for a touchdown. Nagurski took a flying dive at him, virtually on the goal line, and the runner went down and the Badgers failed to score.

Iowa Goes Down.

In 1930, he drove through the Iowa line and carried Willis Glasgow, an all-American, with him to make the touchdown.

If you think Nagurski didn't carry his college spirit into the professional ranks, just get a load of this. With the Bears playing the Detroit Lions and the two teams fighting for the league lead there was bitter feeling among the players. The game was scoreless at the time that Nagurski made a drive for the goal line some 40 yards away. He just took the ball, ducked his head and began plowing. When he crossed the line he was going at such a fast clip that he crashed into the dug-out many yards away. It was one of the few times in his grid career that he has been knocked out. The touchdown won the game.

Wins 232 Matches.

Nagurski made his pro wrestling debut in 1933 at Minneapolis, tossing Tag Tagerson. When Nagurski flattened Dean Dutton to win the title, it was his 232d pro battle.

I'm told that there are two things that will make the ordinarily good-natured Nagurski fighting mad. One is to say he is "yellow" and the other is to say he is a "green" wrestler. However, no remarks seem to bother him when he is on the mat.

As I got up to leave, Bergman said, "Haight, that's a picture of the greatest football player of all-time."

——and, darn it, I could have sworn that the photo of Knute Rockne on the other side of the office nodded as if he was seconding the motion.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Irregularly Lower in Less Active Trade; U. S. Govt. Bonds Weaker.

New York, Jan. 12.—The drizzle of selling in the securities and commodities markets turned into a light rain and prices were wetted down in most sectors. Leading stocks were depressed by fractions in sharply reduced sales volume. Stock turnover was around 1,250,000 shares, but a goodly number of stocks managed to hold firm or even rise a little. United States bonds weakened. Wheat and cotton were unsettled. May wheat closed a quarter of a cent higher at 96¼ cents a bushel.

Weakness in stocks spread to most groups, but individual issues at times were able to move ahead. Preferred stocks were especially successful in doing that and the thin market permitted gains of 4 to 6 points in a few cases. The contrariness of the trading was shown in Armour preferred, for example, of which one gained 4 points while another was losing more than 3. Chesapeake & Ohio was barely steady, but one of the Alleghany preferreds climbed more than 3 points. Pittsburgh Steel common and preferred were strong in contrast to the selling of Bethlehem and United States Steel common shares.

Wide Swings.

Both Westinghouse and General Electric settled back moderately. General Motors and Chrysler held a steady tone. New York Shipbuilding was an active stock with little change in price. Store stocks were mixed. In the list of stocks to rise 3 to 6 points on one or two sales were Acme Steel, Outlet Co., Bangor & Aroostook, Manhattan guaranteed and Bon Ami B. Carolina, Clinchfield dropped more than 6 points. B. M. T. preferred jumped more than 5 points and the common was higher. All the tractions were strong, utilities and rails improved slightly. Coppers lost a little ground

If advice will do any good a change for the better in the Administration's stand on business will take place. An impressive array of business leaders is now filing into and out of the White House offices and during the next several days the queue will continue to form. While the President's conferences with the country's economic royalists scarcely will uncover only one point of view, there is certain to be unanimity along the main line of Government conduct. It is difficult to believe that the object of the conference is merely the inducement of business men to conform docilely to the President's ideas of "co-operation," whatever they may be; fairness impels the assumption that the Administration is sincerely trying to find out what is wrong with the economic state of the Nation, and that when it discovers the trouble it will take steps to end it.

Always Politics.

On the other hand, more than a handful of people will be skeptical enough to think that politics continues to play important parts in the proceedings. Whatever may be told the President, if what he does thereafter does not improve conditions he then can say that he took business men's advice and it didn't work, or that he gave business a chance to show him the way and it didn't respond. From a political standpoint the willingness of businessmen to go to Washington will put figures on the credit side of the Government's ledger; it can't be said that it tried to bull through without seeking the best advice.

Slow Recovery in Steel.

Some further pickup in business activity from the knock-down at the year-end is revealed in mid-week statistics. Railroad freight car loadings for last week, as estimated from the reports of leading roads, climbed more than 20 per cent from the previous week, but dragged over 21 per cent under the same period of last year. That is ample explanation, when the higher costs and lower freight rates and passenger fares are considered, for the prevailing distress in the railroad securities markets. Just the same, as J. J. Pelley, head of the Association of American Railroads, told the Senate Unemployment Committee today, the picture could change quickly. What is most needed immediately is a little financial aid and higher freight rates. Railroad improvement quickly would spread to numerous other industries, just as general recovery would aid the roads.

Wheat Prices Recover With Foreign Sales

500,000 Bushels Are Sold for Over the Seas Export.

Chicago, Jan. 12.—Evidence of improved European demand for wheat from the United States helped Chicago wheat prices late today to overcome 1-cent-a-bushel temporary setback.

Opening prices, unchanged to 6 lower, proved to be about the best levels for the day as the recent advance close to the Government loan level attracted a little more Southern selling and tempered demand.

Zinc Production 12% Over Year Ago

The 1937 output from domestic ores was estimated at 550,200 short tons, an increase of 12 per cent over 1936.

Shipments exceeded production in the first eight months, the Bureau said, but much of the early gain was erased by a decline in business in the last third of the year.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London, Jan. 12.—Sharp declines were registered in Chinese and Japanese bonds, losses running from 3 to 6 points. With the exception of motor stocks, the industrial section remained firm, and copper shares sold higher on the recent advance in that metal. Domestic rails were fractionally up, while British funds and rubbers were neglected.

Paris.—Government bonds were weak in today's session of the bourse, rentes closing with net declines of 35 to 75 centimes. Suez Canal shares lost 300 francs and Bank of France was down 45. Royal Dutch held steady and finished 25 francs up.

Liverpool.—With practically no demand for cash wheat and lower prices at Winnipeg today, wheat futures here declined and closed 1¾d to 2¾d net lower. Cotton futures eased under scattered profit-taking and hedge selling and closed 2 points lower. Egyptian cables reported lower prices there.

Boston Wool Market.

Boston, Jan. 12 (AP).—(United States Department Agriculture).—Demand continued very quiet on the Boston wool market today.

The recent weakness of prices in Australia and New Zealand has encouraged buyers to make low bids on domestic wools. Boston houses generally, however, are not considering the low offers. An occasional buyer that needed wool at once was paying prices about in line with the sales closed last week. The volume of wool moved was very small.

"WHILE YOU WAIT."

Bob Burns Says—

The police in a big city like this have sure got a tough job. During a recent drive, when they were roundin' up all suspicious characters, I happened to be ridin' with one of the policemen and we passed right by a big innocent lookin' business man who had jest finished puttin' over a deal that would brankrupt nine firms.

The policeman didn't pay any attention to him because he didn't look a bit suspicious, but in the next block, we saw a little old man sneakin' out of a house with a frightened look and when the officer collared him and shook him a couple of times, the little old man confessed that he was tryin' to sneak out of the house so his wife wouldn't make him wash the dishes.

Two Japanese Armies Drive to Cut Soviet Link

By the United Press.

Shanghai (Thursday), Jan. 13.—Two Japanese armies were reported today to be driving across North China in a race to occupy Kansu Province and cut off land communications between China and Soviet Russia.

Warning of the ambitious Japanese operation came from Gen. Yeh Chien-hing, chief of staff of the Chinese Communist Eighth Route Army, after a Chinese announcement that Outer Mongolia has been declared a formal war zone.

It was believed here that the Outer Mongolian announcement might lead to increased Russian aid to China and that the Japanese offensives were designed to cope with such a development.

Million Troops Massed.

The Chinese, meanwhile, organized to stake everything on a defense of the Suchow area north of Nanking, massing more than 1,000,000 soldiers to meet an attack by 500,000 Japanese moving up in four separate columns.

Foreign military experts said that, should the Japanese smash the Chinese forces on that front, reorganization of China's armed resistance would be futile and the outcome of the entire war might easily be decided there.

Gen. Chien-hing, calling for a vigorous defense of Wuhan's triple cities in the far north, asserted that one column of Japanese troops emerging from victories in southern Shantung Province to the east is striving to occupy eastern sections of Lunghai, whence they probably will strike out westward against Chengchow.

Railroad Endangered.

At Chengchow, Shantung troops [illegible] contact with [illegible] from northern [illegible]

Should [illegible] succeed, Gen. Chien-[illegible] turned, it would be comparatively easy for the enemy to [illegible] from Changchow and Hopeh to seize the Hsinyang-Pinghan Railroad and isolate China's great cities in the north.

It was speculated here that any Japanese invasion of Outer Mongolia would lead to quick action on Russia's part under the 1936 mutual assistance pact between the Soviet republics and Outer Mongolia, despite the fact that China refused to recognize the pact.

By the United Press.

Tokyo (Thursday) Jan. 13.—Japan may send a peace "ultimatum" to China attached to a statement of positive war policy, it was believed today as army, navy and foreign office authorities drew up separate accounts of their imperial conference with Emperor Hirohito.

These accounts, it was understood, will be submitted to the cabinet and then to the Emperor before Japan's policy statement is announced, perhaps tomorrow.

The decisions were a guarded secret today but were presumed to include a program of diplomatic and military action taking into account a peace agreement.

If a final "ultimatum" for peace is dispatched to China it probably will point out the vast plans which the Japanese have made for the "annihilation" of the Chinese forces of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek.

The situation appeared to be that, through the mediation of the German ambassadors to Japan and China, the Japanese government had received a statement of China's position and the Chinese government had received a statement of Japan's demands.

Apparently, also, there was no basis for agreement in these statements. But it was indicated that until the moment when a definitive statement of policy was made the government still hoped that China might agree to terms.

The ministry of finance reported yesterday, close upon the heels of the imperial conference, that Japan's national debt at the end of 1937 stood at 11,892,000,000 yen ($3,451,761,200), an increase of 1,497,000,000 yen ($435,776,700) or 14.4 per cent over the total debt at the end of 1936.

Canton Is Bombed.

Canton, China, Jan. 12 (U.P.).—Twenty-eight Japanese planes made four raids in Kwangtung province between 8 a. m. and 8 p. m. today, bombing Canton for the third consecutive night.

Three Japanese aircraft carriers were reported off the south China coast.

42,000-Ton Vessels to Be Larger Than New Craft Launched by Duce.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Jan. 12.—France projected two 42,000-ton battleships today to match the rising might of Fascist Italy's seapower in the Mediterranean.

These giant warships, exceeded in size among the world's listed fighting vessels only by Great Britain's 42,100-ton battle cruiser Hood, would be France's direct answer to the authorized construction of two new Italian battleships. Premier Mussolini announced January 7 that Italy would build two 35,000-ton battleships—the Roma and Impero.

(France previously had laid down the 35,000-ton battleship Richelieu in 1935 and a sister ship, the Jean Bart, in 1937, as "replies" to Italy's Littorio and Vittorio Veneto, also 35,000-ton warships, laid down in 1934 and launched last summer.)

The French Chamber of Deputies navy committee was preparing to ask Minister of Finance Georges Bonnet to supplement the 1938 naval budget by 2,000,000,000 francs (currently $68,000,000) from the sorely-pressed treasury to keep ahead of Mussolini's forces at sea.

Besides the financial strain on the treasury, there also existed the problem of providing naval bases suitable for such sea monsters. The navy has begun a survey of bases and port facilities to see if any are adequate.

Nazi Chief Blomberg Wed Very, Very Quietly

Berlin, Jan. 12 (AP).—Marshall Werner von Blomberg, German minister, was married quietly today—so quietly time, place and bride's name were secrets.

The bride, Blomberg's second wife, was said to be in her late twenties. One source gave her name as Fraulein Gruhn. Official quarters and intimates of the 59-year-old marshal refused, however, to disclose details before tomorrow.

Portugal Seizes 'Reds' Inciting Army to Revolt

By the Associated Press.

Lisbon, Jan. 12.—Police today arrested a number of persons they described as Communists trying to incite a revolt in the Portuguese army and navy.

Many of the arrests were made after a pistol battle in a burning house, said to have been the main Communist headquarters.

Among several suspects seized elsewhere was a woman who police said had made "sensational revelations" about a terrorist organization in Portugal with connections abroad.

A printing press, political leaflets and copies of a newspaper called Avante were seized in the raid on the alleged Communist headquarters.

According to police, secret agents trailed "a certain well-known person" carrying a suitcase to the building in the Rue Beneficia. He was arrested on the doorstep, and the suitcase was found to be full of proclamations intended for distribution to soldiers and sailors urging them to rebel against the Salazar government.

(The Gibraltar dispatches said trouble arose from the premier's decrees ordering drastic army reorganization. Troops waited in their barracks last Friday, it was said, "ready to act if necessary," while army officers sent an ultimatum to Salazar demanding cancellation of the decrees.)

Stalin Places Trusted Aides Over 'Congress'

By the United Press.

Moscow, Jan. 12.—Dictator Josef V. Stalin, presiding over 1,143 delegates of the new supreme Soviet elected a month ago in Russia's first secret ballot, tonight placed two of his trusted lieutenants in control of both houses of Parliament.

Andrew A. Andreyev, commissar of railroads and one of the Communist Party's four secretaries, was elected president of the Council of the Union at a noisy meeting in the grand palace of the Kremlin, where once the Czars were crowned.

Eight years ago, Andreyev, 42-year-old member of Stalin's politburo, was an obscure day laborer who rose in two years to a post on the Council of People's Commissars, equivalent to vice premier.

Mikhail Shvernik, secretary of the All-Union Council of Trade Unions, was elected president of the Council of Nationalities.

The only trace of opposition to the parliamentary program came when a burly tartar opposed the scheduling of meetings of the council between 6 and 10 p. m. each day. He said he wanted to go to the movies.

Stalin's selection of his "strong men" for the parliamentary posts was taken as indicating that he will refuse before the Supreme Soviet adjourns in about eight days to accept public office as president of the supreme presidium under his new constitution.

Instead, it was believed, he will surrender titular leadership of the government to work behind the scenes.

Bund Has Broken No Federal Laws, U. S. Agents Find

By the Associated Press.

Justice Department agents found no violation of Federal laws in their investigation of the American-Deutscher Volkesbund, a usually well-informed official said yesterday.

The Volkesbund, more widely known as the German-American Bund, has been under surveillance since last August.

Canadian-U. S. Air Pact Speeded

Canadian and American aviation officials in conference here on international aeronautical questions will fly to Langley Field, Va., today to visit the laboratories of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics.

J. Monroe Johnson, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, said yesterday the conferees were making rapid headway in negotiations to bring up to date a 1929 agreement between the United States and Canada. He said the old agreement is inadequate and foresaw no difficulty in reaching a new one, possibly by tomorrow.

Dispute's Meaning Disputed Topic in Labor Picket Case

By the Associated Press.

For two hours yesterday members of the Supreme Court heard opposing counsel in a case dispute the meaning of the word "dispute."

The court then took under advisement the question whether there was a labor dispute—within the meaning of the Norris-LaGuardia act—when members of a labor union picketed stores of an employer whose workers were not members of the union and were not on strike.

These were the facts argued in the case: The Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butchers Workers, Local 73, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, picketed stores of E. G. Shinner & Co., Inc., in Milwaukee. The labor group had sought unsuccessfully for unionization of the Shinner company employes and a closed shop. The firm obtained an injunction against the pickets.

I.C.C. Told Rate Boost Will Not Aid Railroads

Chicago, Jan. 12 (AP).—William F. Ehmann, chief of the transportation division of the Public Service Commission of Wisconsin, contended today railroads would derive no benefit from higher freight rates. A witness at an Interstate Commerce Commission hearing on the carriers' proposal to raise charges 15 per cent, he said such a "tremendous amount of traffic" was being diverted to trucks that it seemed impossible rail lines could expand their revenue by increasing rates.

Ecuador to Study Foreign Concerns' Concession Deals

Quito, Ecuador, Jan. 12 (AP).—Provisional President Alberto Enriquez, who rules Equador at the head of a military government, today said it was planned to review all concessions and contracts with foreign companies in Ecuador.

Enriquez referred particularly to the South American Development Co., which is backed by United States capital and has worked South American gold mines since 1896.

Other companies mentioned included the Anglo-Ecuadorian Oil Co., Ltd.; All-America Cables and the Compania Bananeria Ecuador (Ecuador Banana Co.), a subsidiary of the United Fruit Co.

STILL "TOPS"... after 31 Years As a Tobacco Auctioneer

"There was a buyer, naturally, for every one of those 489,000 pounds... But there was as much difference between the best grades and the inferior, as between a pretty girl and a homely one.

"At auction after auction, I've seen Lucky Strike go after the prettiest lots of tobacco. It's no wonder Luckies taste so good. I've smoked them since 1917.

Only Lucky Strike offers you the finest tobacco plus the throat-protection of the exclusive process "It's Toasted". This process takes out certain irritants found in all tobacco—even the finest.

Men who know tobacco from A to Z—experts like Mr. Edwards—are surely good judges of cigarettes... Sworn records show that, among independent tobacco experts, Luckies have twice as many exclusive smokers as have all the other cigarettes combined.
